Coastal Commission staff says 'no' to Odello East

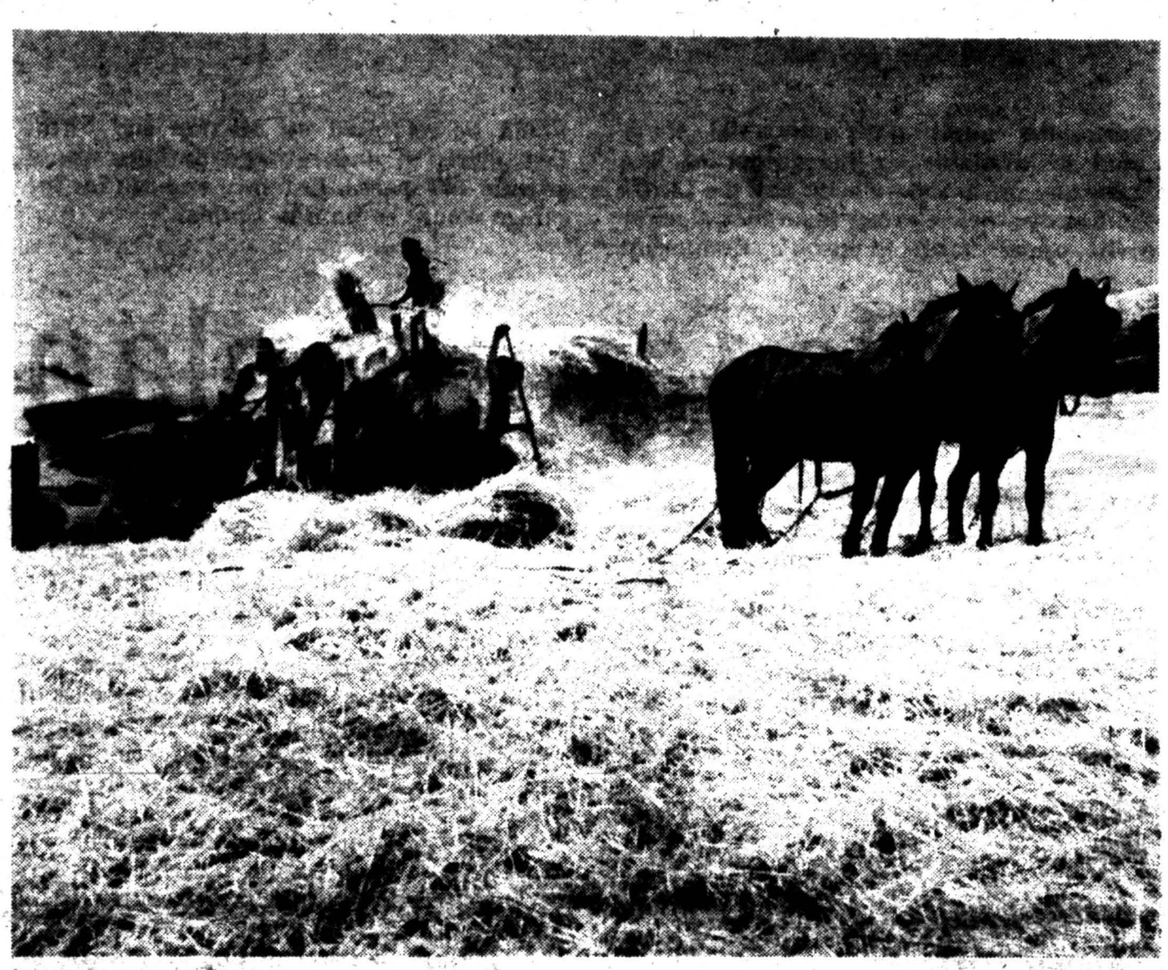
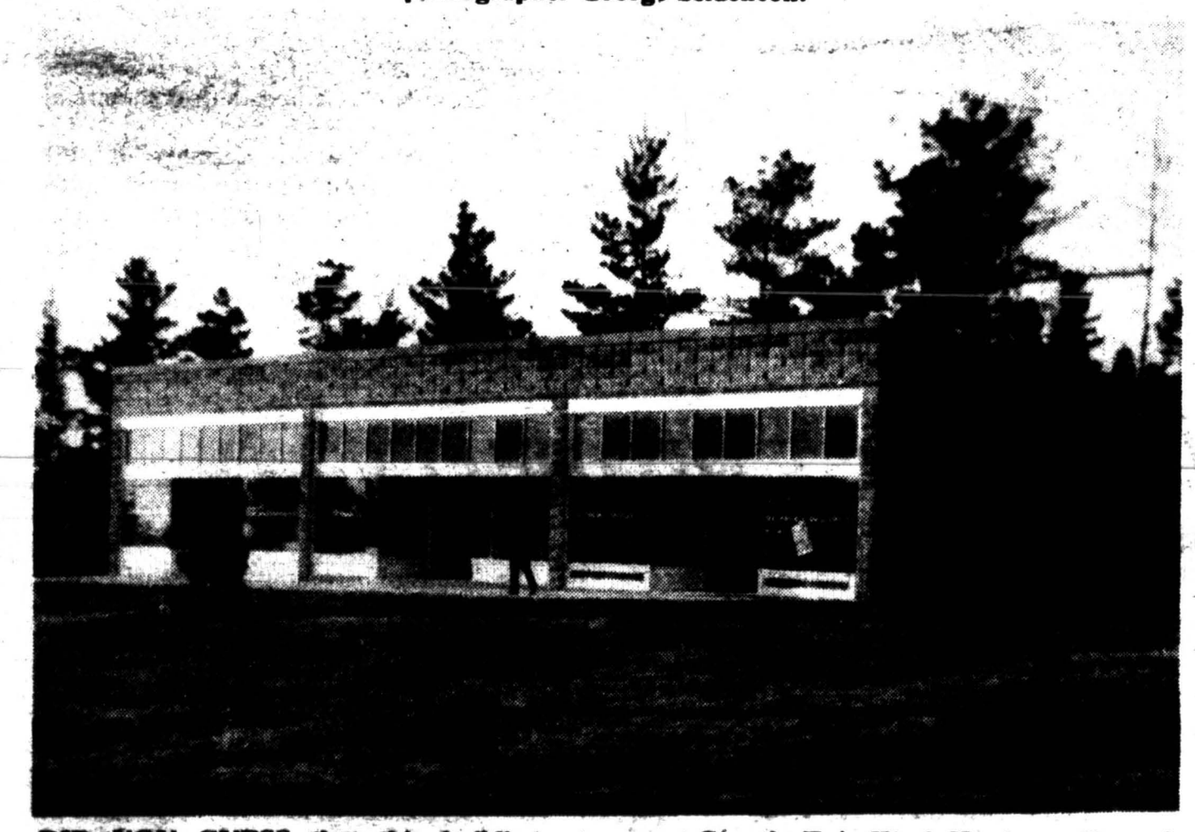
A TRIP DOWN MEMORY LANE



HAYING in Carmel Valley in the 1930s was captured for posterity by Valley photographer George Seideneck.

THIS IS THE CREW that made the first cut over Carmel Hill on June 14, 1929. The new road would continue down the coast to Big Sur. Lewis Josselyn was the photographer.



DID YOU GUESS that this building at Ocean and San Carlos now houses Carmel Drug Store, Burlwood and Dansk II? Back in 1908 it was the home of the Carmel Development Co., the T.A. Work Hardware Co. and the Preble Grocery Co. Note unpaved Ocean Avenue and the young Monterey Pine in front of the building.

OCEAN AVENUE looked like this in 1908! The view is down the hill, westward toward the ocean. The stable buildings to the right were located on the corner of Ocean and Junipero.

Earliest recorded images of our area

Long after memories fade, photographs remain. They capture and permanently record visual images ranging from the growth of a child to major historical events.

Pat Hathaway, a young Monterey Peninsula photographer, has built a life around old photographs and has earned himself the title "the Monterey Peninsula's Photo Historian."

In slightly more than 10 years, Pat has amassed a collection of between 30,000 and 50,000 old plates and negatives that include the earliest recorded images of the Monterey Peninsula, Big Sur and Central California.

Pat claims he was always interested in collecting things. He was born in Paris, France in 1948. His father was killed in the French Indo-Chinese war. His mother remarried, and the family moved to the Peninsula in 1956 where his stepfather, Col. James L. Hathaway, was deputy post commander of Fort Ord.

Pat first collected rocks, then seashells and finally buffalo nickels. Today it is photographs.

His first interest in photography grew when he observed and then learned photographic developing and processing. The interest led him to work on his high school newspaper and yearbook and eventually to own a professional-quality camera.

While serving in Vietnam, Pat took many human interest photographs; later he worked in a military photo lab in Alaska. By the time he returned home to Pacific Grove in 1970, Pat had decided to join his interests in photography and collecting.

The Pat Hathaway Collection of Historical Photographs began with a generous gift of 3,000 negatives taken by the pioneer photographer Lewis Josselyn.

Josselyn's widow had tried to donate the negatives to several libraries and historical societies in hopes of preserving them.

When Pat received the negatives, he first made copy prints of each, then identified and cataloged them. The negatives cover the years 1914-1940. Shortly thereafter, he rented a space in the Pacific Grove Art Center to house the beginnings of his collection.

Carmel Valley photographer George Seideneck gave a large collection of his negatives to Pat before he died. These are the two major contributions to the collection. The balance has been bought, traded for and donated.

Pat stores his precious negatives and plates in special acid-free archival envelopes (acids are destructive to photo emulsions) and indexes each negative with a coded numbering system patterned after the National Maritime Museum in San Francisco.

What does he do with his photographs?

ARCHITECT'S RENDERING of a new two-story structure proposed by the Little family for the 32,000 square foot site on San Carlos and Fifth presently occupied by Carmel Sands Motel and Simpson's Restaurant. The Littles want to demolish the existing structures and add 15 more motel or time-share units. Existing law would restrict them to only 32 motel units. A moratorium on time-sharing is now in effect while the city studies the question. Commercial space would be available on the corner of San Carlos and Fifth, shown here, and the Littles would move their Carmel Insurance Agency to the upper floor. Simpson's Restaurant would be relocated on Mission and Fifth. Two levels of underground parking would provide 147 spaces. Entrance and exit for the garage would be on San Carlos.

An uphill fight for Little family plan

THE LITTLE FAMILY of Carmel presented a $3 million proposal to the Carmel Planning Commission Aug. 19 to rebuild and expand their Carmel Sands Motel and Simpson's Restaurant on a 32,000-square-foot site on 5th between San Carlos and Mission.

The proposal, which would result in construction of 56 new motel or time-sharing units and an underground parking garage with 147 spaces, was not a formal application but rather a preliminary presentation under provisions of the city's zoning ordinance.

Under existing law, the Little Brothers (Matthew, Robert, Kenneth and Larry) would be allowed to rebuild only 32 new motel units to replace the existing 43-room structure. A 20-year-old ordinance requires 1,000 square feet of site for every motel unit. In seeking to add 13 motel rooms, they point out that portions of the site not devoted to motel or restaurant use now total 15,000 square feet. So, theoretically at least, they could add 15 units to the existing motel for a total of 58 units.

The two-story structure would have commercial space on the ground floor on the corner of San Carlos and 5th. Simpson's Restaurant would be moved to the corner of Mission and 5th. The Littles also hope to move their Carmel Insurance Agency from the present location above Nielsen's Market on San Carlos and Seventh to a permanent home on the upper floor of the new building.

Architect for the project is Olof Dahlstrand, a former member of the Carmel City Council and planning commission.

Dahlstrand outlined plans for eight lots of 4,000 square feet each.

"This brings me to the proposal possibility of Dr. (Don) Davidson," referring to a suggestion in March of this year by Davidson, who was then a member of the planning commission. Davidson proposed allowing motel density of one unit per 5,000 square feet of floor space instead of the 1,000 square feet now required. Since the law was enacted in 1960 at the urging of Gunnar Norberg, the number of motel rooms in Carmel has remained at 915.

The architect also outlined an alternative proposal which would include purchasing and developing one more lot.

Commissioner Sandy Sw[illegible] asked Dahlstrand if the Littles were going to wait for the General Plan to be completed.

"Actually, the moratorium caught us by surprise. And that's good because the General Plan needs to get done and issues addressed," Dahlstrand said.

He said if it appeared from the General Plan discussions that certain things took a positive direction, "we'd start plans."

"So what is really holding you up is timeshare vs. motel?" asked Miss Swain.

"It looks very good on the surface, but it also means you give up some property rights, so we're leaning toward the motel," Little said.

'We're getting cars off the street and putting people within walking distance of downtown.'

"So you're talking about Davidson's proposal," Miss Swain said.

"Yes," Little said.

Little called timeshare "running a motel on a seven-day basis with the option of renting rooms on a daily basis."

Timesharing is presently being studied by the planning commission and City Council. A moratorium blocks timesharing now.

Asked later about the planning commission response, Little said, "I'm optimistic. They are cautiously positive, and that's a good sign.

"We're taking down an existing hotel and putting up a better one. The same is true of the restaurant, which is in a building designed as a furniture store. Basically we want to improve on something good and make it better and to last a lot longer.

"We're not intensifying the problem of more retail exposure, plus we're getting cars off the street and putting people within walking distance of downtown."

City Planning Director Bob Griggs said he feels the concept is one "Carmel is ready for."

"The concept does have merit. It does reduce the area that could be devoted to commercial floor area and provide businesses more residentially oriented than commercial in nature.

"There would be no rezoning of R-1 (residential) land. Anticipated vacant lands might be replaced or existing motels might expand the number of units, if they could provide parking," he said.

Coastal Commission staff recommends:

'No development on Odello East property'

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE COASTAL Commission staff has recommended that no development be permitted on eastern Odello property south of Carmel as part of the Carmel area Local Coastal Program.

State commissioners will consider and possibly adopt the staff recommendations at a public hearing on both the Carmel area and Big Sur LCPs Sept. 3 at the Grosvenor Airport Inn, 308 S. Airport Blvd., South San Francisco.

Another staff recommendation is that development of up to 299 units be permitted on the Hudson-Riley Ranch across Highway 1 from the Point Lobos State Reserve.

Recommendations are based on two public hearings on each of the LCPs, one held in Carmel in June by the regional commission just before it went out of business and another in San Francisco by the state commission in July.

Original draft of the LCP approved by a Citizens' Advisory Committee allowed development of one unit per 2.5 acres on the eastern Odello property — or about 60 units. That limit was revised upwards by the Board of Supervisors to permit 52 to 90 residential units in addition to as many as 157 motel units plus a farmer's market and a restaurant.

Considerable opposition to the increased density of development on the Odello property was expressed at both Coastal Commission hearings.

"Because of the prime soils on the eastern Odello property, that land has been recommended for agricultural preserves," said Bill Van Beckum, Coastal Commission staff planner in Santa Cruz. "All policies in the LCP pertaining to development on Odello east have been deleted in the staff report."

•

THE STAFF has also recommended that the Carmel area LCP contain a prohibition against land subdivision that would produce increased residential density south of the Carmel River.

"The intent of the Coastal Act is to allow public access to the coastline, and that is why not all visitor-serving development is excluded," Van Beckum said. "The net effect is no new subdivisions in the area south of the river."

Recommended maximum density in the Hudson-Riley Ranch area of 299 units includes 12 existing homes, 47 new residential units, and 240 visitor-serving units. The staff has recommended that no more than 10 of the 299 units be new, non-employee housing.

"We have also recommended that the policy on development in that area be amplified to require residential clustering and substantial open space," he said. "There's a recommendation that lower cost visitor facilities in the form of a 25-unit hostel and campground comprising 20 percent of all visitor-serving units constructed be built and open to the public in the Hudson-Riley area."

Another staff recommendation is that use of a conference center planned in the Hudson-Riley area be limited to patrons of the hotel facility. Any development in the Malpaso Creek and Yankee Beach areas south of Carmel should be conditioned upon provision of public access to the coast, the staff has recommended.

Creation of a 100-foot buffer zone to protect riparian vegetation along the Carmel River is also recommended in the Coastal Commission staff report. A permit process would permit waiver of that condition only if the applicant could demonstrate that his development or use would not harm river vegetation.

And the Coastal Commission staff has recommended location of a proposed parking lot to serve the San Jose public beach at its northern, rather than southern end, as had been planned in the original Carmel area LCP.

THE BIG SUR LCP recommendations by the Coastal Commission staff "will basically reflect what the county has already approved," said Ed Brown, executive director of the Coastal Commission staff in Santa Cruz.

"The recommendation is for no surface mining at Pico Blanco which would be visible from public viewing areas or which would impact the critical watershed areas, such as the Little Sur River," Brown said. Mining would be permitted only by permits issued by the county.

Result of this policy, if adopted, would be to "very tightly restrict" any mining in the Pico Blanco area, including limestone mining on private land owned by Granite Rock Co. of Watsonville.

"Granite Rock has a number of options there," Brown said. "Our recommendation wouldn't foreclose their entire use of the area, but any mining would be very tightly limited."

The staff has recommended maintenance of the ratio of 85 percent single-family dwellings to 15 percent visitor-serving units in the Big Sur LCP, as well as linkage of future development to highway improvements on Highway 1.

There is also a recommendation for a clearer definition of what is the "critical viewshed," since that is crucial to implementation of the LCP policy to prohibit development in the viewshed, Brown added.

After hearings and adoption by the Coastal Commission, the Carmel area and Big Sur LCPs will be certified by Monterey County for inclusion in the county's General Plan.

LCP meets in Santa Cruz

A local participation meeting to allow public comment on the Carmel area and Big Sur LCPs has been set for 9 a.m., Aug. 28 at the Santa Cruz County Government Center, Room 525, 701 Ocean St., Santa Cruz.

The meeting has been scheduled by the local Coastal Commission staff to receive public comment in advance of the state commission meeting of Sept. 3

Village Green files for Chapter XI

DEVELOPERS OF the 22-unit Village Green condominium project in Carmel Valley have filed for reorganization under Chapter XI of the bankruptcy code.

A spokesman for the $5 million development on Ford Road and Carmel Valley Road said the project was a victim of high home mortgage rates and general economic distress.

"Before construction was even underway, we had reservations with deposits for all 22 units," the spokesman said. "As the bank interest rates increased, the dropouts increased. We gave them back their deposits with interest."

Major financing institution is Home Federal Savings and Loan of San Diego,

Sales of condominiums at Carmel Valley Ranch are healthy, Marotta says. Thirty-five of 40 already built have been sold, 40 more are under construction.

which has $3.4 million invested in the project, he said. The balance of the $5 million came from private financing, including partners in the development.

Action to file under Chapter XI with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court, Northern District of California, in San Jose was taken after Home Federal filed a notice of default approximatley 90 days ago, the spokesman said.

That was to have been followed by a trustee's sale, but the legal action now enables the Village Green, Ltd. partnership to file several plans of reorganization with the court to satisfy its creditors.

Price of units in the project average $200,000, and the interest rates offered for mortgages is 11.8 percent, the spokesman said.

"Not only can people not afford the high monthly payments, they're not psychologically conditioned to pay $1,600 to $1,700 a month even if they can afford it," he said. "With the interest rates on construction running full tilt, you can't outrun the payment date.

"We have tried to work out a program with our lender so flexibility would be built in, so they'd receive their money when we receive ours. We've asked the court for a plan of reorganization to demonstrate there is value beyond the loans on the property."

•

SINCE INTEREST RATES soared over the last year, all but three of the purchasers of the condo units have pulled out.

"We only have hard contracts on three units out of the 22," he said.

One of the alternatives under consideration by the developers of Village Green, Ltd. is sale of the entire package, which could result in the conversion of the units to another use, such as rentals, the spokesman said.

"This has not lessened our efforts to move these things," he said. "We will continue to work with the buyers any way we can. This is becoming increasingly more common. I look at filing under Chapter XI as a defensive management plan. It's an action to defend the assets and integrity of the organization.

"Chapter XI is not bankruptcy; we are not in receivership. This just puts things in a holding pattern so we can balance our creditors with our payers."

Village Green, Ltd. is to call a meeting of creditors before Sept. 19 to discuss its situation and to present its various plans for repayment of debts. Under new bankruptcy laws, bankruptcy judges do not exercise continual supervison over Chapter XI cases.

Bankruptcy judges can not attend regular meetings of creditors, and matters under a Chapter XI action only come before the judge if the debtor, a creditor, or other interested party files a complaint or makes motion with the court.

A creditors' committee is to be appointed to serve as a representative on behalf of all unsecured creditors in a Chapter XI action.

SALES AT CARMEL Valley Ranch continue to be healthy despite the high interest rates, said Nick Marotta, Carmel Valley Ranch Homes agent for the development.

Units at Carmel Valley Ranch at Mid-Valley offer comparable financing, with 11.8 percent loans, Marotta said. Purchasers must provide a 10 percent down payment, but there is no maximum loan. Prices of the Carmel Valley Ranch units range from

VICTIM of high interest rates and low sales, the Village Green condominium project in Carmel Valley has filed for reorganization under Chapter XI of the bankruptcy code.

$245,000 to $385,000.

Forty townhouse units have been constructed and 35 of those have been sold and are awaiting completion of financing and close of escrow, Marotta said. Escrow has closed on 26 of the 35 units, and they have already been occupied. Another 40 are under construction.

Carmel Valley Ranch recently received approval for a use permit from the Monterey County Planning Commission for another 113 units, but the developer has asked to withdraw 30 of those units designated for employee housing.

"We're right on schedule," Marotta said. "We've done $12 million worth of business since Jan. 17. I think it's because of all the amenities we offer — a tennis complex, golf course, a 24-hour-a-day security service, hiking and riding trails. The weather is ideal. We've got the only game in town.

"Real estate, as a whole, has never been worse. But fortuantely for us, we're doing very well."

White Oaks condominiums appeal denied

THE STATE Water Resources Control Board has denied an appeal by the Environmental Law Fund which would have blocked a permit for a septic system at White Oaks Condominiums in Carmel Valley Village.

After a one-hour hearing in Sacramento, the state board unanimously rejected the appeal filed by Richard Rosenthal of Carmel Valley and Alexander ("Zan") Henson of Carmel.

That appeal sought rejection of a permit approved March 13 by the Central Regional Water Quality Control Board for a septic tank-leachfield system at the 38-unit condo project.

Board members based their decision to deny the appeal largely on a staff report which found no substantial evidence presented that the septic system would cause degradation of groundwater quality.

But the board also ordered the septic system to be relocated away from a bluff, and nearer to the center of the development, as recommended by the staff report.

Henson said no legal appeal of the water board's decision is planned, although he remains extremely skeptical about the septic system.

"I believe there is a definite uncertainty as to the workability of that septic system and I will continue to monitor it," Henson said. "But I wouldn't want to bet on its working."

The developer was represented at the hearing by Monterey attorney Francis Lloyd.

THE STATE WATER board recommended that the regional board re-evaluate its basin plan prohibitions for both community and individual subsurface disposal systems to be consistent with state water code requirements.

"The cumulative effect of the use of septic systems in the Carmel valley is being investigated by several local agencies," the water board staff reported. "The regional board should closely monitor those studies. If it appears that the level of salts are increasing so that beneficial uses may be threatened, the regional board should undertake an amendment to the basin plan to establish appropriate water quality objectives or prohibitions."

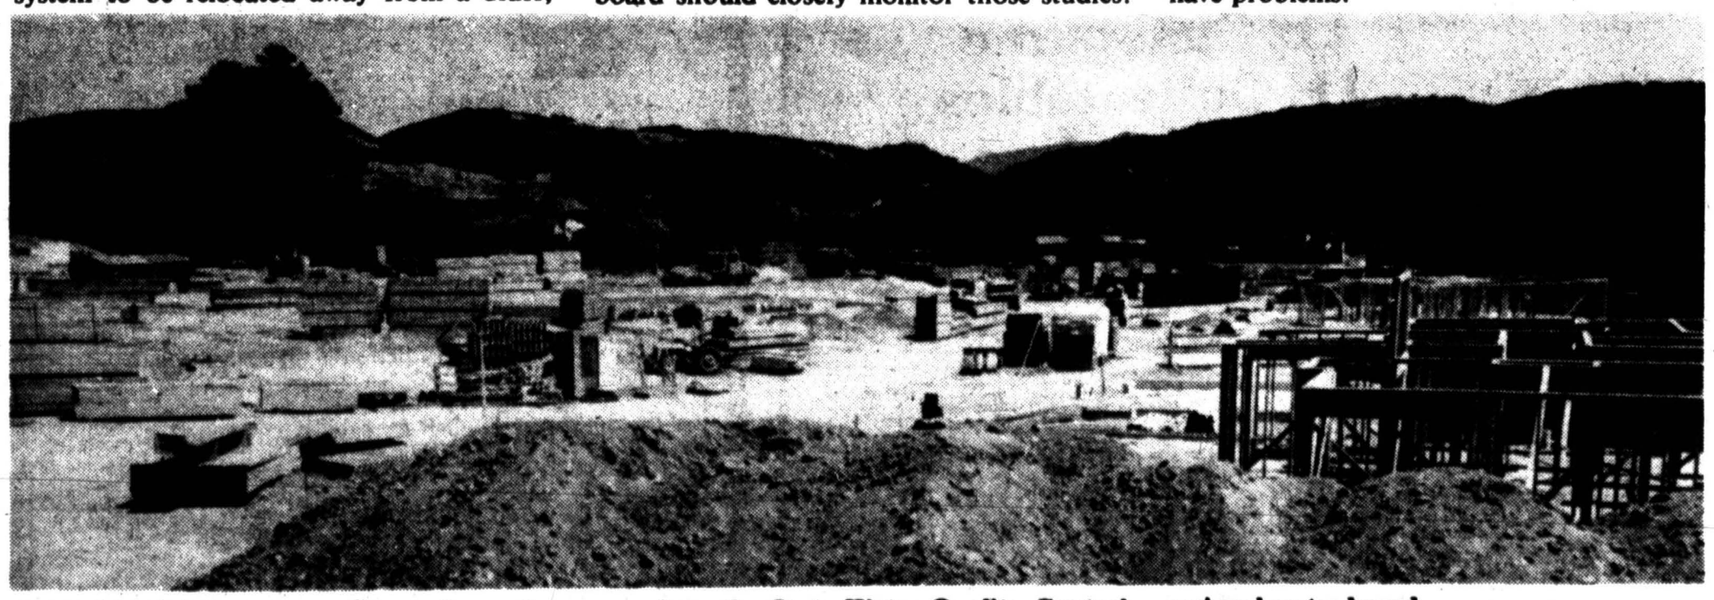
The Monterey County Health Department and the Regional Water Quality Control Board have expressed concern over extensive use of septic systems in the Valley.

•

ENVIRONMENTAL Sanitarian Walter Wong said he was satisfied with the White Oaks system.

"My feeling is that we were extremely tough on them," Wong said. "We got the number of units reduced from 100 to 38, and we had them do additional hydrogeological studies. I was satisfied with their analyses.

"Septic systems are all right for rural areas. It's when you get a concentration of them, or if you tried to substitute them for a sewer system in an urban area, that you'd have problems."



CONSTRUCTION moves forward on the 38-unit White Oaks condomnium project in Carmel Valley Village following denial of an appeal to the State Water Quality Control Board over the septic system. The state board upheld the approval of the project by the regional water board.

Federal wastewater funds may dry up for Carmel

FUNDS FOR CONSTRUCTION of the $13.7 million Carmel Sanitary District water reclamation project may not be released until next year, if at all.

Directors of the district will be briefed on possible delays or outright elimination of funding for the project when they meet at 1:30 p.m., Thursday, Aug. 27 in Carmel City Hall.

'There won't be any federal EPA money for any projects on the west coast after this year.'

The State Water Resources Control Board is to adopt a priority list Sept. 15 for funding of water pollution control projects which designates state funds for the Carmel project for 1982-83.

There is a clear possibility the Reagan administration will eliminate all Environmental Protection Agency funds for water pollution control projects after the 1981-82 year, Carmel Sanitary District business manager Bud Bigelow told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

Unless the federal portion of the $13.7 million project, which amounts to 75 percent of the total cost, is approved, then the state portion cannot be funded, Bigelow said. The state portion is 12.5 percent and the local share is 12.5 percent.

"It appears that most of the money to be released by the state this year will go into urban projects," Bigelow said. "And it also appears there won't be any federal EPA money for any projects on the west coast after this year.

"We've sent telegrams to Washington trying to put all the pressure we can on them."

•

THE CARMEL Sanitary District has entered into contracts for completion of the second phase of the project, for design of an outfall line, sewer interceptor to Pacific Grove, and use of treated water on golf courses in Pebble Beach.

Total amount approved for the second phase of the project is roughly $1 million.

Contracts with the Pebble Beach Corp., Monterey Peninsula Country Club, Cypress Point Golf Club, and others are near completion to provide a market for the treated water from the reclamation project, Bigelow said.

The district has been directed by the State Water Resources Control Board to cease discharge of effluent into Carmel Bay during most months of the year because of its designation as an Area of Special Biological Significance.

If funding for the project falls through, the state may have to modify or suspend its designation of Carmel Bay as an Area of Special Biological Significance, Bigelow said.

"If that happened, we'd just have to put our project on the shelf until there are some funds available," he said.

Carmel Sanitary District board chairman Charlotte Townsend and manager Mike Zambory journeyed to Sacramento last week to urge the State Water Resources Control Board to keep the water reclamation project on the funding priority list for 1981-82.

"They moved us to 1982-83, and we want to be re-classified on the list for 1981-82," Bigelow said. At its Sept. 15 meeting, the state panel might modify the priority list before adopting it.

The board will also award a contract for reconstruction of the Fourth Avenue sewer in Carmel. Estimated cost of the work is $45,000. It is required because of deterioration through age and root damage.

Reagan administration official defends water resources cuts

ROBERT N. BROADBENT, Commissioner of the Interior Department Bureau of Reclamation, said this week that the Reagan Administration cutbacks are designed to set "greater state and local involvement in water policy decisions."

Speaking in Coronado before a statewide meeting of the California Water Resources Assn., Broadbent said, "The idea is to enhance the opportunities for development by broadening the base of participation."

State and local-government financial participation in water projects will become increasingly important, Broadbent declared. "The federal treasury can no longer afford to advance all or nearly all the costs," he said, "despite the fact that over the long run the capital costs of reclamation projects are paid back."

"We're going to have to crank in some front-end financing and cost-sharing formulas that reward states' willingness to undertake major shares of the financial burden," Broadbent said.

The commissioner said the Reagan administration supports continued western water development and is intent on getting the program "back on track."

"We have completely done away with the 'hit list' mentality that was so harmful to water resource interests," Broadbent said. "We have turned away from the policies that branded water development as 'pork barrel' politics.

"We have reversed the direction of the previous administration that tried to get rid of the Bureau of Reclamation, and that subjected practically any kind of development to delay upon delay and to 'paralysis by analysis.' "

To speed up authorization and completion of major water projects, Broadbent said, the administration supports replacing the federal coordinating role of the Water Resources Council with a new cabinet-level Council on Natural Resources and Environment.

He added that other "procedural improvements," including "improved management of the environmental review process," could also cut costly delays in water resource development.

Board to decide on closing schools within 60 days

THE CARMEL UNIFIED School District Board of Education will decide within 60 days whether to close schools in response to declining enrollment and reduced revenues.

A timetable for full analysis of the alternatives and economic implications of various decisions was agreed upon by the board at its Aug. 18 meeting.

Superintendent Bill Rand will form a professional committee immediately to study the curriculum and instructional implications of changing grade patterns. Findings of that committee, with a school enrollment capacity report and a school facilities report on the sale or lease of facilities, are to be presented to the board Sept. 22.

At its Oct. 13 meeting, the board is to review architect's estimates of housing a grade 7-12 or 9-12 program at the Middle School and High School, and the cost of housing grades six through eight at Tularcitos and River Schools. Elementary schools now handle grades K-5.

The board will also receive an education committee report at its Oct. 13 meeting on instructional implications of various grade patterns, and will schedule one or more study sessions, where public comment will be received.

Final date for a decision on the use of school facilities was set as Oct. 27. No changes are anticipated before the 1982-83 school year.

A district advisory committee which held public hearings last spring and studied the problems of declining enrollment and reduced district revenues.

The committee recommended that one or more elementary schools be phased out by next year.

Other recommendations by the committee were:

- Existing grade pattern of K-5 (elementary) 6-8 (middle) and 9-12 (high school) should be revised to either a K-8, 9-12 pattern or a K-6, 7-12 pattern.
- The district should operate only one secondary school and close either the middle or the high school.
- One or two elementary schools should be closed if projected student enrollment decline continues.

Enrollment in the district is anticipated to drop from a high of 3,148 in the 1974-75 school year to 1,723 by 1985-86. The district also has been squeezed financially by the Serrano-Priest decision, which reduced state assistance to relatively "wealthy" districts, such as Carmel.

A school facilities subcommittee is studying effects of sale, lease or closure of certain school facilities as one means of generating additional revenue. Their report is expected to be completed and in the hands of the Board of Education next month.

CV intersection called 'boondoggle'

CONSTRUCTION OF a major intersection at Robinson Canyon Road and Carmel Valley Road could start as early as January.

The Board of Supervisors by a 3-0 vote approved a declaration of negative environmental impact for the intersection project at their Aug. 18 meeting. Completion of the underpass is crucial to further development of Carmel Valley Ranch, the largest development in the Valley's history.

If enough people express an interest in stopping the construction until an environmental impact report can be prepared on growth-inducing aspects of the intersection, Alexander ("Zan") Henson, special counsel to the city of Carmel and opponent of the intersection, said he will be pleased to take the supervisors to court.

"The intersection is a boondoggle," Henson said after the supervisors acted. "It has been totally unplanned for. There is a real question whether a lawsuit should be filed to determine the growth-inducing aspects of the underpass."

Voting to approve the negative declaration, preliminary design of the intersection, and notice to proceed with the construction in a single motion were Supervisors Michal Moore, Barbara Shipnuck and Marc Del Piero.

Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley abstained and Third District Supervisor Dusan Petrovic was absent.

"We've said all along that however this intersection was developed, somebody would get shafted," Henson told the supervisors. "It will cause us to lose the rural character of Carmel Valley. The intersection is growth-inducing" and will permit the development of further increments in Carmel Valley Ranch.

"Public works projects must be consistent with your General Plan. But we do not have a master plan for the Valley," Henson reminded the supervisors. "There is nothing by which you can measure whether this is consistent with the General Plan."

Adoption of the Carmel Valley Master Plan has been suspended until it can be revised, based on the findings in a recent environmental impact report prepared by court order which resulted from a successful legal challenge by the city of Carmel.

•

CARMEL CITY ATTORNEY George Brehmer told supervisors the intersection could adversely affect business prospects and property values of Ada Roxbury, who owns commercial property adjacent to the Farm Center on Carmel Valley Road.

"We're concerned about the elevation of the roadway in front of the property," Brehmer said. "An elevation of three or four feet in the roadway several years ago has very significantly affected her business.

"Any substantial deviation in the shape of the roadway would cause Mrs. Roxbury a loss of customers. The design of the intersection doesn't allow traffic from the east to pass from the Farm Center and pull in front of her property."

Brehmer requested that a two-way access road to the intersection be extended to the Roxbury property to improve visibility and traffic access.

Richard Rosenthal, a Carmel Valley attorney, told the supervisors there had been no finding of consistency between the intersection and state planning guidelines in effect until the Valley Master Plan is revised and adopted.

"Once this roadway is constructed it will intensify pressures for the full buildout of

Carmel Valley Ranch," Rosenthal said. "Air quality will continue to be degraded in Carmel Valley, and there will be an increase in noise.

"This intersection will generate a need for more housing and obviously will have an adverse, cumulative effect. I believe an environmental impact report is mandatory for this project."

•

THE INTERSECTION is designed to accommodate four times the traffic volume currently using the intersection. County Civil Engineer Mo Orrett said vehicle volume is currently 1,700 per day at the intersection. That figure would significantly increase when the full 500 units of the Carmel Valley Ranch are developed, he added.

Mitigation measures proposed for the intersection include the replacement of trees, as well as planting of new trees and landscaping of the roadway slopes, Orrett said.

"It would be a typical roadway treatment," he said. "In addition to plantings, there would be a reduction of air pollution by keeping the traffic moving. That's a stop-and-go intersection now, and that generates more pollution than one where traffic is constantly moving. The whole idea is to mitigate problems of increased development."

Monterey County Public Works Director Bruce McClain told the supervisors the intersection design is "about as good a design as you can come up with. We see no substantial impact on the environment."

McClain said the contract with the Carmel Valley Ranch developer, Landmark Lands Co. of Oklahoma, requires construction to start by June of 1982, but actual construction could start "at the end of this year."

'I told you the arguments would come to people saying they don't like something after you've found a solution that works. People come back and say they don't like it because they don't want growth in their area.'

Cost of the intersection, which will be paid by the developer, is estimated at about $1 million. Part of that amount would be repaid if other developments in the Robinson Canyon area use the facility. They would share in the cost.

Kaye Chandler, project manager for Carmel Valley Ranch, said all the issues pertaining to the intersection had been studied in supplemental information in the Carmel Valley Ranch environmental impact report.

"I told you so," said Fourth District Supervisor Michal Moore. "I told you the arguments would come to people saying they don't like something after you've found a solution that works. People come back and say they don't like it because they don't want growth in their area.

"This road configuration was to be a mitigation to a project we had already agreed to. This design is long overdue and it offers a direction we should be taking in terms of health and safety. That road is a danger now."

Supervisors approved the intersection design after they gave the public works director instructions to see whether the two-way access road could be extended to the Roxbury property. A second public hearing is to be held on the final intersection plan in September.

Carmel High girls swim team schedules first practice Sept. 1

First practice of the season for the Carmel High School Girls Swim Team is scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 1, 9 a.m. at the school pool. Students interested in trying out for the team must do so at this time.

The Padres will open the season with league relays on Sept. 17, 3:30 p.m. at the school pool.

The team has not lost a dual meet for the last eight years, and will try to extend its 80-0 winning streak. Coach Bob Walthour feels that although this year's team lacks the depth of the past teams, it still has many fine swimmers to carry on the winning tradition.

This year's team will have 26 returning swimmers, led by senior team captain Kira Garrett, and seniors Sarah Hicks, Lynn McDonald and Jenny Powell.

Council wades into talk of annexation - momentarily

THE CARMEL CITY Council momentarily waded into the explosive issue of annexation during a special meeting last Thursday while it tried to deal with objections to a condominium project proposed on three sites just outside the city limits in Carmel Woods.

The property on Torres, in county territory was the former site of Carmel Hospital. Existing zoning on the property allows single family dwellings or duplexes. One of the owners, Masoud Yavari, of Carmel Valley, proposes to construct six two-story condominium units.

Looking ahead to possible future annexation, the council was concerned about the project's impact on the city.

Some questioned whether the city could rezone land to bring it into conformity with Carmel zoning after it is annexed.

Councilman Howard Brunn said he always assumed lot sizes are not changed after annexation.

"It becomes a balancing thing, in exchange for protection and services from the city," Mrs. Arnold added.

City Administrator Doug Peterson reminded the council that they were at a special meeting and could not discuss annexation because it was not an agenda item.

The council finally adopted a statement to be forwarded to the County Planning Commission which stated that "the creation of a new structure 120 feet long and between 40-feet and 46-feet wide is out of scale and not in keeping with the zoning intent of this area (Carmel Woods) not in keeping with the majority of buildings in the immediate neighborhood."

Any other remarks related to the project will be reviewed in a special meeting at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 8 when the council hopes to see a mock-up (with pole and ropes) to visualize how much of an impact it will make on the site.

Objections were heard from numerous residents, including Dr. Joe Vesel who urged the city attorney to submit a negative legal opinion in behalf of Carmel Woods residents "to prevent the requests of carpetbaggers."

"These condos don't fit into our woods," said Vesel, calling himself a pseudo-Carmelite. He said the plan was not feasible for four condos, or even two.

Another woman spoke about the additional traffic hazards that would result in the area with construction of multiple units.

County health director warns parents:

'If kids don't have shots — no school'

If you have a child ready to enter day care, nursery school or kindergarten this fall, make sure you have a current immunization record to present at the school," Robert J. Bowersox, M.D., Director of Health for Monterey County, advises parents.

All public and private schools, nursery schools and day-care centers throughout the county now have a strict "no shots-no school" policy. This means that parents will need proof of immunizations at registration.

The immunizations required for most children, depending upon age, are 4 DTP (diptheria), tetanus and whooping cough); three doses of oral polio vaccine; and immunizations against measles, rubella and mumps.

"The immunizations are the parents' responsibility," Dr. Bowersox said. "The child should have all the required immunizations before school starts in September, and parents must have a record to prove it."

When chldren attempt to register without immunization records, needless frustration is caused for parents. It also creates a last-minute rush to obtain services from medical providers, he said.

Dr. Bowersox recommends that parents check immunization records promptly. If immunizations are needed, or if records cannot be found, the child should be taken to his doctor or to the nearest Health Department Immunization Clinic. With the county's "no shots-no school" policy in place, children will not be registered for school if they lack necessary immunizations and records.

The School Immunization Law allows exemptions for children if immunizations are against the personal or religious beliefs of their parents. Exemptions may also be allowed for children with certain medical conditions. Parents with these concerns should contact their school before registration.

Business Beat

Changes in the wind

By FLORENCE MASON

"MY RENT'S GOING up from $450 a month to $3500. After 40 years here, what can I do?" "That 900 percent increase is typical of what is happening to businesses that serve this neighborhood. Increases range from 500 to 900 percent. A shoe store is going. . .the man whose rent is now going to be $3500 is a barber and he too is closing his shop. What can be done? Well, we are considering zoning laws to restrict movement of businesses such as restaurants into the area. . ."

Where did these remarks originate? No, not in Carmel! They are from a news broadcast and the location of the stores was Clement Street, San Francisco. One difference, of course, is that Carmel has already taken action with a moratorium on certain land use changes. We are not alone.

★ ★ ★

Speaking of television: Jerry Schribner, the anti-Medfly campaign director, speaking of plans to handle the new threat in Santa Cruz County, said his office would be "noticing the people." He didn't mean becoming aware of them; he meant that notices would be sent to them. The great age of verb-iage?

★ ★ ★

Introducing: Robert Lewis Smith, an energetic, cheerful Carmel resident who would like nothing better than to hunt down that special antique you want, or to be the consultant for an interesting decorative project. Laughing, Smith said he would even go to Europe on the first quest. What he really meant (I think) was that he would get in touch with contacts in Europe as well as in the East and locally.

Smith has just obtained a license for the sale of antiques, decorations and home accessories on an appointment-only basis. He will be working out of an office on the north side of Seventh between San Carlos and Dolores (above Gloria Brown's new studio).

This doesn't mean that he will be giving up his other great enthusiasm — the paintings of Pebble Beach artist George Bleich. Smith will stay on as director of Bleich Gallery West on Dolores south of Carmel. "I admire his paintings beyond belief," he said.

The new venture is in effect a formalizing of what Smith has been doing for years — searching for and finding special antique items for people and "dabbling" in decoration. When the space became available, it all "just sort of fell in place."

Smith lived in this area many years ago, including a stint in charge of the Big Sur Inn. That was in 1950. More recently, he had been living in Marina del Rey, where he and a partner still maintain a boat.

As far as Laurel Chase-Dunn is concerned, a rose by any other name would not smell as sweet. For she is The Rose Lady.

Yes, that's a business, and a growing one too. In fact, Ms. Chase-Dunn recently advertised for "a full-time rose person" to help her with the business she started last December. It really got underway in March of this year, and now with 25 restaurants on her list (13 in Carmel) she needed another assistant.

She was looking for someone experienced in sales, "with a big smile and full of energy." The smile and the energy are expended in the sale of roses to restaurant customers. Dressed in custom-made European peasant type costumes ("or like Alice in Wonderland") The Rose Lady's helpers dispense red, yellow, white or pink roses from a basket. According to Ms. Chase-Dunn, red roses are still the most popular, but it isn't only Texans who buy yellow ones. White may be for special occasions and pink — well, perhaps they carry a special message for some.

Men purchase most of the roses, but not all of them. Birthdays are the occasion for many of her sales. Ms. Chase-Dunn or one of her helpers makes two rounds in each restaurant, seven nights a week.

Ms. Chase-Dunn knew the restaurant business from the vantage point of having been a cocktail waitress, but this is her first business endeavor on her own. She has been in the area for about one year, was at Tahoe before that. The idea for her business — The Rose Lady — came to her because she was thinking about what a romantic area Carmel and the Monterey Peninsula is. "Roses add something special to that romance," she said.

★ ★ ★

Another new business: Girard's Natures Interiors. In "the mall" on San Carlos north of Sixth, it's a specialty shop, featuring tables, clocks, mirrors and hand carvings. All are made out of wood — a variety of kinds, including burlwood and manzanita.

Partners Lorraine Girard and Steve Allen hope to expand into custom wood work at a later time. Allen is the manufacturer and will deliver the merchandise directly to the shop.

Ms. Girard lives in Visalia at present, but that is only temporary. Because the shop is primarily for the sale of furniture, it does not come under the city's new moratorium, which was good news to Ms. Girard.

Expansion is the name of the game for two already-established local businesses.

As of Monday, Aug. 17, it was possible to have your mail delivered to your home or business in Carmel! Before anyone jumps to the conclusion that Carmel's historic, unique postal system is disappearing, I hasten to say that mail delivery is possible only through The Mail Box of Carmel.

This is actually a second area of expansion for The Mail Box, a private mail service on Eighth between San Carlos and Dolores. The first was taking on Western Union services. Now owners Susan ("Tudy") and Jack Carney have enlisted about 20 customers with the start of their home and office delivery service.

"So far, most of them are elderly people, or businesses," Tudy Carney said. "We can handle many more." It is she or her husband who actually delivers the mail, aiming for all of it to be delivered by noon. The service is offered Monday through Friday. However, the informality of the business is evident in Mrs. Carney's added statement: "We only deliver on Saturday if people really want it."

The other change is in emphasis, involving two stores owned by partners Mr. and Mrs. Robert Adams and Richard Scudder. That's Adams Too (Fifth between Mission and Junipero and Adams Eden of Flavor in Carmel Plaza.

Adams Too is moving into nostalgia, Scudder said. The new emphasis, which will come about gradually, is on gifts from the 50s and 60s. For example: a juke box that plays old songs, an antique "plaza lamp," park benches. And perhaps the piece de resistance — an old fashioned carousel horse, hand-carved.

All of that is to correlate with the plants for which Adams

Too is already well known. The object, Scudder said, is "to emphasize what is nice and comfortable in Carmel. The store will be brighter and there will be more feeling in the atmosphere."

Adams Eden of Flavor will continue to offer its specialty — spices, teas and coffees — but there will be more exotic types of coffee, among other innovations. "Here we are moving into an evening theme," Scudder reported. "We'll have exotic chess sets and backgammon, also unique crystal and other impeccable gifts."

And still they come. . .Betty and Gary Goldstein, owners of B&G Traders (Ocean between Dolores and Lincoln) are going to have another location for the retail sale of fine jewelry. This one will replace the former jewelry counter within Peck and Peck, women's clothing store in the Plaza. The higher quality of the jewelry may be the only change, as Goldstein said he will be using the same counters and cabinets.

As a continuing use, the new business is not subject to the city's new laws about the subdivision of one large store into a number of smaller ones. Are we all getting used to thinking in those terms?

"A few students in my home" became the Sabin-McEwen Learning Institute. Now founder Gertrude McEwen will be opening a school in the Sunday school rooms of All Saints' Episcopal Church.

"It's really more of a clinic than a school," Mrs. McEwen said, "at least until the students are coming for half days." She and her associates have been seeing pupils with reading, writing, spelling and arithmetic difficulties in local private schools or in her home for about three hours per week. In September — assuming approval of her application for a use permit — a staff of eight specialists in learning disabilities or reading will work with a maximum of 60 young people in the new setting. There will never be more than 10 at any one time, as many will continue to be seen in the private schools.

The students must have at least average ability. Many of them are very verbal, but have discrepancies in certain other skills. Reading ability is the key to improvement, with each student learning at his or her own pace and style. With state accreditation, expected shortly, the Institute will qualify for direct referrals from local public schools. However, the students would continue to be enrolled in the local school as well.

A local psychiatrist and a clinical psychologist will be involved in the Institute's program, as will parent groups.

Mrs. McEwen was a reading specialist in the Oakland public schools until her husband retired and the couple decided to occupy their vacation home in Carmel full time. Starting with one or two children in need of the special training she provides, she developed the program into the formal school that is just about to take shape in the inviting rooms at All Saints'.

"It's different, it turns me on. But I don't know how the planning commission will see it." (Sandy Swain, planning commissioner and member of the Business License and Code Review Board.)

"There is certainly nothing like it in Carmel." (Chief of Police Bill Ellis, also a member of the board.)

What was the object of these comments? The Grunion Run! That's the name that owners Ron Reynolds and Rudy Reate came up with for their fresh fish restaurant, soon to materialize at Mission and Fourth.

In explanation, Reate told the BLCRB "We were trying to do something different." That they succeeded was evident, and it met with the approval of the board. However, consideration of names for businesses in Carmel by the planning commission is on a different basis and it remains to be seen if "The Grunion Run" passes that hurdle as well.

The businesses is incorporated as Fresh Fish Cafe and that is the name the owners had planned to use. However, at an earlier meeting the BLCRB voted it down on the grounds of possible conflict with similarly-named nearby establishments.

Fresh fish is all the restaurant will sell, once its name and the conditions involved in transforming a former electrical shop into a unique restaurant are met. It will not be open just at the time of a full moon, although that is when grunions (small silversides) are said to run.

International Bazaar and Ball upcoming

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

The event calls for international dress or black tie — and if you want to socialize with the Beautiful People you'd best get your reservations in early as space is limited.

What's the special event? It's the International Bazaar and Ball and the Bi-Annual Auction for the benefit of the Monterey Institute of International Studies.

The exciting gala will be held at the Beach and Tennis Club at Pebble Beach on Saturday, Oct. 31 with the festivites kicking off at 6 p.m.

A silent auction will take place under an exotic bazaar tent and will be followed by a brief live auction. A gourmet dinner will then be served and music will be provided by the famous Walt Tolleson Band from San Francisco.

Honorary chairmen for the gala are Virginia and Ansel Adams and Nancy and Lorne ("Bonanza") Greene.

Co-chairmen are Mrs. Jack Daugherty and Mrs. Henry Huntington II.

Bidding should be fun as some of the interesting auction items are: a four-day cruise on the Azure Sea Fun Ship; a week in a Hawaiian condominium; a magnificent 6-panel Coromandel screen; a weekend at the Smuggler's Inn, Fresno; a white fox stole; a "beautiful year" at Transitions; antiques; paintings; and many other fabulous things.

FRANK AND ROSE ELKOURI CELEBRATE 55TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY IN CARMEL

William and Marilyn Silva of Carmel recently enjoyed the company of some very special houseguests — Marilyn's parents, Frank and Rose Elkouri of Anadarko, Okla., who celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary during their two-week visit.

Marilyn and Bill met her parents at the San Francisco airport and drove them through the wine country before arriving home for a celebration party at the Beach and Tennis Club of Pebble Beach.

According to Marilyn, there was at least one party each day as her parents were entertained by many of the Silvas' friends including Joe and Sheila Mark, Gael and Rose-Marie Himmah, Aram and Joy-Ann Kinosian, Fred and Pauline Stanley, Lee and Diana Newell and Karen Rowe.

And naturally, there was a big "farewell party" at the Silva home the night before her parents left.

Bill, by the way, is a builder/developer, so the Silva family, including 11-year-old William, spend their summers in Carmel and winter in Sherman Oaks. While in Carmel they live on the original Silva property which once belonged to Bill's famous grandfather, William Posey Silva, who was one of the founding artists of Carmel. He moved here in 1913 and remained until his death (in his 80's) in 1948.

During his years in Carmel, Grandfather Silva (as Bill and Marilyn lovingly refer to him) had an art gallery on San Antonio right across from the sand dunes. Marilyn said that at that time the property was commercially zoned for the Silvas, and when the property was sold it went back to being residential.

Grandfather Silva has a painting hanging in the Louvre in Paris and his work can also be found in the Harrison Memorial Library and in the chambers of the Carmel City Hall.

Now, back to the anniversary couple for a moment . . . of Lebanese decent, Frank (born in the U.S.) lived in Lebanon from ages 3 to 13 before moving with his family to the United States.

"Dad still has some of the beautiful 'old country' ways," said Marilyn. "When he and mother left, dad kissed and hugged my husband which I thought was very beautiful. Dad wasn't sure he wanted to come to Carmel in the first place as he was afraid there wouldn't be anything to do — but he left exhausted!"

The couple owned their own department store for 52 years. When asked the secret of a long and happy marriage Frank replied: "When we were first married I told my wife — 'I'll make the living and you make life worth living' — and she's done just that."

Much happiness Frank and Rose!

TOM IS TEACHING KARATE

World traveler Tom Bleecker is home to Carmel following a two-month vacation to Hawaii where he owns a condo in Kona on the big island of Hawaii.

Tom, who is a writer, producer and director in the motion picture business, has decided to forget about the Hollywood hassle for awhile and enjoy his Carmel home and friends. But not being one to just sit around, Tom, who once worked with martial arts master Ed Parker (and worked out with Bruce Lee and Elvis Presley), is teaching karate classes at the Boy Scout House every Monday and Thursday evening.

Tom said that almost as many women as men are signing up to learn the art, and since the classes are revolving you can enter the classes as they go and not miss out on anything.

Tom has his movie script The Justice of William Starks all wrapped up and it's now in the hands of his ex-father-in-law, producer Blake Edwards. Blake and Julie Andrews' daughter Jennifer (who is Tom's ex-wife and still a good friend) has a strong role in the just released movie, S.O.B.

Keeping Tom company with her frequent visits is his and Jennifer's little daughter, Katie, 5, who loves nothing better than to have Sunday brunch with her dad at the General Store — and romping on the beach.

A WHALE OF A TALE?

Another local who has just returned home following a five-week stay in Hawaii (Kona) is Alan Cordan, who enjoyed the vacation by taking all his children with him — David, Muffin, Holly and Melanie and David Nottenkamper who is a friend of Andy's.

Alan said that if he had one wish it would be to spend all of his waking hours fishing — so he chartered a boat for 20 days during the vacation and ended up catching eight marlin. He tagged and released the six smaller ones but the biggies — one 378 pounds and another 584 pounds — he kept and donated to an orphanage. He said it took him as long as two hours to bring in some of the smaller ones but he won out over the big one in 22 minutes!

Alan will be captain of the U.S. International Team when he heads to Puerto Rico for the Invitational International Atlantic Billfish Tournament, Sept. 3-6. Then he heads back to Kona (Sept. 26-28) for the Jackpot Billfish Tournanment which is offering a first prize of $25,000 — and Alan plans to win it!

In March, Alan will head to Australia for three weeks of marlin fishing and then on to Panama for the International Sailfish Tournament.

Alan is in real estate — but when does this man ever work?

PARTY TIME FOR COMMUNICATIONS SPECIALISTS

Communication Specialists, a local interconnect company specializing in business telephone system sales, installation and maintenance, recently welcomed new sales representative Deborah Richards by tossing a company barbecue. Deborah is formerly of Pacific Telephone marketing department.

About 30 employees and their guests attended the affair and enjoyed cocktails and an array of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres before digging into the barbecued chicken and ribs.

Welcome Deborah!

MONTEREY HISTORY AND ART ASSOCIATION PARADE AND FIESTA

The Monterey History and Art Association will celebrate its 50th anniversary with a parade and fiesta on Saturday, Aug. 29.

Festivities get underway at 11 a.m. when the parade of bands, floats, horses, antique cars and the Wells Fargo stage coach leave Dennis the Menace Park and continue to the Custom House Plaza where the celebration continues through the afternoon.

The Hospice of the Monterey Pennsula will have a booth at the affair featuring large and lovely Mexican flowers fashioned by Ann Yost; a colorful array of Mexican tin crafts donated by Virginia Stanton; and new Mexican import items from Brown's Barn in Carmel.

Many thanks go to Helen Westland and Maggie Downer who were responsible for Hospice's inclusion in the fiesta.

If anyone has items for the booth, please call Carol McClure, 625-0666.

HARLEY AND MARGE WOOD VACATION ON CABIN CRUISER

Harley and Marge Wood of Carmel are taking time off to visit with their son, Danny, who is a Chief Petty Officer attached to an Aviation Tactical Electronic Warfare Squadron, home ported at the Naval Air Station at Whidby Island. They deploy on the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Ranger out of San Diego.

The Woods are rightly proud of Danny, who has been in the Navy for 13 years. He recently received a special Navy Achievement Award from the Secretary of the Navy for professional services while he was on an 8-month deployment in the Indian Ocean.

Danny has a cabin cruiser, and once he gets his parents onboard he plans to take them through the Juan De Fuca Straights and the San Juan Islands up to Canada.

So, those of us who depend on Harley (he's a terrific masseur) to keep our muscles loose and limber, will just have to suffer for the next two weeks.

CARS AND MORE CARS

Fortunately, the weekend was mostly warm and sunny for the thousands of people who attended two very special events — the Concours d'Elegance at the Lodge at Pebble Beach — and the 8th Annual Monterey Historic Automobile Races at the Laguna Seca Raceway.

Race car fans considered all the noise nothing less than "music to the ears" and many of them brought their children who drank soda pop, munched on hot dogs and applauded and waved at all the cars as they went zipping by.

And the Concours d'Elegance seems to get better each year. Thousands of people jammed the grounds at the Lodge to get

The $100 per person luncheon on the terrace of Club XIX to benefit United Way, was, as always, a huge success. Hostess for this affair was Mary-Antoinette Glaser.

And right next door to Club XIX, members of the Club XX group were having a grand old time. Dick and Betty Ghent originated this group about eight years ago and the membership is now limited to 15 people — but each person can invite four guests to the annual gala.

The fun actually begins two nights before the Concours. The Club XX group rents the two suites for a total of three nights — and each night two lucky couples (names drawn from a hat) have the honor of spending the night in one of the two beautiful suites and waking up to a magnificent view of the ocean as well as enjoying breakfast in bed. The lucky couples this year were Dr. and Mrs. Sol Levine; Fred and Paul Stanley; Jack and Nancy Currier; newlyweds Jill and Charles Wagner; Dick and Betty Ghent; and Herb and Shirley Vitt.

On Friday night the group held a "for members only" clam chowder supper and then later, since they are all domino buffs, they settled into groups of four and played for hours.

Saturday brought the group out again or a huge cocktail party after which they retired to the Beach and Tennis Club for an evening of dancing.

Then on Sunday the gang gathered for the Concours and the fun was on. The buffet prepared by the club chefs was delicious. Frank Pineiro, as he has for the past eight years, did a grand job of running the bar and whipping up everyone's favorite cocktails.

Just a few members and guests attending the affair were Betty and Dick Ghent; Pauline and Fred Stanley; Nona and Alex Heid; Nancy and Jack Currier; Patricia Hunt; Marge Steakly and her guests Mr. and Mrs. Bass of Dallas, Texas; the Ray Chaffees; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Fisher; Betty Barron; Lou McMahan; John Conley; Robert and Patty Burris; Florence Drake; and Mr. and Mrs. Greg Weatherford.

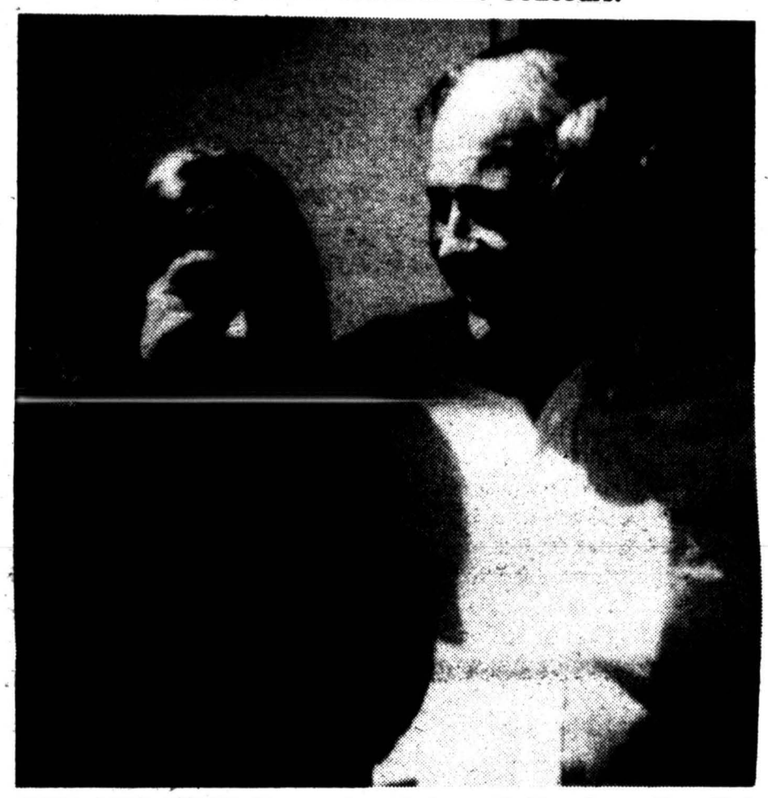
This party gets better every year and the Ghents are already planning a "topper" for the next go-round!

ORIGINATORS of Club XX, Dick and Betty Ghent, enjoy the festivities of the Concours d'Elegance.

DON AND SALLY Lucas chatted with guests at the United Way luncheon held on the terrace of Club XIX.

CLUB XX members Nona and Alex Heid enjoy cocktails at the Concours.

CLUB XX GUESTS Mike and Jan Durney stood on chairs so as not to miss any of the action at the Concours.



DEE AND FRED Farr enjoyed the activities from the Club XX terrace.

Mission Ranch to get dinner theater

DINNER THEATER will replace rock-and-roll at the Mission Ranch. Veteran actor and singer Bruce Tuthill will be director of the new theatrical enterprise, the Mission Ranch Dinner Theater; he has a six-month contract.

A professional opera singer for 12 years, Tuthill toured with the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera and has appeared in many local productions.

He most recently starred as Don Quixote in the Hartnell College Western Stage production of Man of La Mancha.

Tuthill told the Pine Cone that he was asked to experiment with a cabaret format after the rock and roll shows, produced by Doug Rochelle, were ousted from the Mission Ranch barn this summer.

The initial experiment "went well enough that they (Ranch management) wanted to pursue it further. It was very obvious that something bigger could go. We came up with the idea of a dinner theater."

Recruiting several local singers and musicians, Tuthill put together a revue that made its debut last Saturday night. The revue includes hit songs from the last 40 years. Tuthill is the obvious star, lending his fine, strong voice to the success of the show.

The first performance was not widely publicized; this week's revue will be the official public debut for the group.

The troupe includes Richard Conklin on drums; Kathy Nathan on bass; Paul Rubrect on piano, Ken Boutelle, who has appeared in Barnyard Theater productions; Tom Sanchez, who recently appeared in Macbeth at Monterey Peninsula College, and the Brewster Sisters — Lyn Whiting, Kelly Saunders and Diane Trovato.

The Brewster sisters have performed together since last year when they appeared in the Wharf Theater production of On The Air.

•

PLANS FOR FUTURE performances include productions of Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris, Working, based on the book by Studs Terkel, Side by Side by Sondheim, and a show for children at Christmas time.

Tuthill said there will be open auditions for each production, although he also hopes to bring in guest professionals from Hollywood.

Performances will run Friday and Saturday nights for six weeks. Tuthill says he eventually hopes to expand the shows to three nights a week. Dinner will begin at 7 p.m. with the performance at 8:30. There will be music for dancing after the performances.

Tuthill first came to this area from Hollywood in 1977 when he was asked by the Barnyard Theater to star in Oklahoma! He has been involved in theatre in this area ever since, interspersed with commitments in Los Angeles and elsewhere.

"I have hopes of coordinating the six live theaters in the area to do co-op advertising," he said. He would like to see all the theaters employ a master calendar, with one doing a comedy, another a drama, and each promoting the other productions.

"There are plenty of people out there who want to go to live theater," Tuthill says. "Competition is unnecessary; nine million tourists a year go through here."

•

MISSION RANCH owner Rolf Stolesen said he does not anticipate any problems with neighbors about the dinner theater. There had been ongoing complaints about the rock and roll concerts.

"It's an entirely different operation that draws an older crowd. They are mature people who do not leave in the manner that the rock crowd did," Stolesen said.

He said there is some work underway to cut noise levels still further, but noise has always been within the legal limits.

Tuthill said he hoped to talk to neighbors to allay any fears they might have about the dinner theater concept.

"I want to sit down with them and explain what we are trying to accomplish. We need their backing and support and we don't want to step on any toes."

Stolesen said present plans are to deduct the cost of dinner from production revenues and return the balance to offset future productions. Tuthill added that his long-range plans include paying salaries to at least part of the cast.

"We are not looking for a large profit," Stolesen commented. "We are trying to develop an ambience that will tie the whole Mission Ranch together."

Church of the Wayfarer awards scholarships to recent graduates

The Church of the Wayfarer in Carmel, and the Bing Crosby Youth Fund have granted scholarships to five local high school graduates.

The students are Robert De Lossa of Pebble Beach ($750, Robert Louis Stevenson School) who plans to enter Princeton or U.C. Berkeley as a philosophy major.

Claire Arnal of Carmel Valley ($500, Carmel High School) who will attend UC Santa Barbara as an arts and science major;

Michael Colvin of Carmel Valley ($500, Carmel High School) who will enter Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo as a general studies major

Amanda Miller of Pebble Beach ($500, Pacific Grove High School) who plans to attend Oral Roberts university as a pre-med student.

Mary Politzer of Carmel ($500, Santa Catalina School) who will attend UC Davis and major in economics or pre-law.

This is the fourth year that the Church of the Wayfarer has awarded scholarships. Thirteen students have received grants to date.

Applications for the 1982 scholarships will be available at all Monterey Peninsula schools in January.

Farrs named to UOP board

John and Kathryn Farr of Carmel have been elected to the board of directors of the University of the Pacific, Stockton, Alumni Association. They will serve three-year terms.

Opponents balk, CV Ranch backs off

By ROBERT MISKIMON

PLANS TO CONSTRUCT low and moderate income housing at Carmel Valley Ranch are still very much alive. At least, that's what the developer says.

Landmark Lands Co. of Oklahoma, the developer, plans to ask the Monterey County Planning Commission to withdraw 33 of the 113 units conditionally approved June 10 as part of a use permit for the second phase of development of the 500-unit project.

Seventeen of those 33 units were designated as low and moderate income housing to comply with the county's inclusionary housing ordinance, which requires the developer to set aside 15 percent of the 80 units for that purpose.

But project manager Kaye Chandler told the Monterey County Board of Supervisors Aug. 18 that costs of building the 17 units had skyrocketed to $250,000 each, and asked to drop that portion of the project.

Supervisors, faced with three appeals of the use permit from different persons and groups, sent the question of the 33 employee housing units back to the planning commission for another public hearing within 30 days.

One of those appeals, filed by the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, questions whether adequate consideration had been given by the planning commission and supervisors to the question of the low income housing.

The board of supervisors continued the appeals for 90 days to give the developer an opportunity to seek an amendment to the use permit deleting the 33 employee housing units.

Developers of the project appealed a use permit condition attached by the planning commission which requires completion of contracts for improvement of the Robinson Canyon Road-Carmel Valley Road intersection before approval of any more than 20 units in the subdivision map.

(See related story elsewhere in this issue.)

Richard Rosenthal of Carmel Valley appealed the use permit on the basis it allows more density than is permitted in the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan, and based on the contention that the use permit is not consistent with the state requirements.

•

LANDMARK LANDS can comply with the inclusionary housing ordinance by contributing 15 percent of the project — in units, land or cash — to provide housing for low and moderate income persons. Chandler said it is his intention to build the housing, rather than contribute cash.

"We will drop back to the original 80 units and then make an application to rezone the parcel where the 33 units were to have gone," Chandler said after the supervisors' meeting. "We would have to get the parcel rezoned to planned unit development, then we'll ask for approval to build the original 11 units planned on that lot.

'It appears that the Board of Supervisors is committed, come hell or low income housing, to the Carmel Valley Ranch," Henson commented afterwards. "Procedurally, the whole thing was bizarre. I'm amazed at the arrogance of Carmel Valley Ranch, and I find the action by the supervisors incredibly arrogant.'

"We had to do this because of construction costs and interest rates. If the interest rate wasn't so extreme, we could have built the units sooner. We'll try it again on another application," Chandler said.

Alexander ("Zan") Henson, special counsel to the City of Carmel, said he found it "troublesome" that the developer could wait until final approval of all phases of the project before deciding whether to build the low income housing or make a cash contribution.

"It appears that the Board of Supervisors is committed, come hell or low income housing, to the Carmel Valley Ranch," Henson commented afterwards. "Procedurally, the whole thing was bizarre. I'm amazed at the arrogance of Carmel Valley Ranch, and I find the action by the supervisors incredibly arrogant."

The request by Chandler to withdraw the 33 employee housing units came as a surprise, even to the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, which had prepared a compromise agreement with Landmark Lands on its appeal of the use permit.

•

ANNE MCGOWAN, CVPOA attorney, told the supervisors she would agree to a continuation of the appeal for 90 days while the developer asked for an amendment to the use permit.

"If the amendment is approved by the planning commission, we will consider our appeal to have died a natural death," McGowan said.

"The planning commission would like to know how you intend to meet the requirement for 15 percent of the 80 units as low and moderate income housing," asked Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon.

"We will do it when we come back with more increments," answered Myron Etienne, developer attorney.

"I'm not sure it would have gotten out of the planning commission with that kind of an answer," Slimmon replied.

"That inclusionary housing ordinance allows us not to make a final decision until later," Etienne said. "I suggest continuance of all appeals for 90 days and in the meantime we will amend our use permit at the planning commission level.

"It is extremely unlikely that the planning commission would have changed their minds with respect to the 80 units even if we were not going to build the 33 employee units."

•

SUPERVISORS see-sawed on the question of whether to hear the appeals or continue them, pending revision of the use permit by the planning commission.

"This is a flat mess," said First District Supervisor Marc Del Piero. "This is terrible. If the Carmel Valley Ranch drops 33 units, does that change their application substantially?"

"It doesn't change the 80 units," Slimmon answered. "The question is where are the 15 percent of those 80 units?"

"I think this whole thing will be about as clear as mud if we send it back to the planning commission," Del Piero said. "This is the type of stuff that causes animosity at the planning commission level. This board establishes procedure and never follows it. It's crazy."

Slimmon reminded the supervisors that the development of the 17 low and moderate income housing units was predicated on the entire 113-unit development phase.

"If the 33 units are no longer a part of it, the planning commission will then only have the 80 units before them," Slimmon said. "One condition of the use permit requires 17 of those units to be low income employee housing."

County Counsel Ralph Kuchler advised the board that if there is any inter-relationship between the conditions of the use permit, the entire matter should be returned to that body for amendment.

"If we can handle it at this level, why send it back?" asked Fourth District Supervisor Michal Moore.

"If I thought we could hear the appeals and act without litigation, then I would do it," Supervisor Del Piero said.

Supervisors voted 3-0 to refer the matter to the planning commission. Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley abstained; Third District Supervisor Dusan Petrovic of King City was absent.

"I can't see how we can bifurcate a use permit like this," protested Richard Rosenthal of Carmel Valley, one of the three appellants.

"We're not," replied Chairman Barbara Shipnuck.

Energy Commission seeks groups who can make electricity with wind

Carmel and Carmel Valley residents who live where it's windy can now learn whether the wind blows hard enough at their place to make electricity.

Under a new program of the California Energy Commission, 80 anemometers will be loaned without charge to persons and organizations in windy places of the state, with the commission providing technical assistance. To qualify, potential wind developers must be willing to build a project that will produce at least 100 kilowatts.

Those who can apply for loan of an anemometer are: ranchers, farmers, cooperative and small public utilities, communities located in windy regions, urban groups developing an off-site farm, irrigation districts, agricultural organizations, businesses, small municipal water districts or utilities, federal government installations and Indian reservations.

"Wind energy is becoming an attractive and cost-effective electrical generation technology," Commission Chairman Russell L. Schweickart said. "Many Californians recognize that available state and federal tax credits make it an attractive investment opportunity. The commission is beginning this new program to speed introduction of the wind as a substantial source of electricity."

In Monterey County, the commission identifies eligible areas as, "Coastal plains and adjacent mountains; exposed mountain areas above 2,000 feet; all major passes."

In addition to the willingness to build a 100-kilowatt project, the commission said that program participants must show that their project will have "technical and economic viability" at an average annual wind speed of at least 12 mph.

Excluded are wind-farm developers, wind-turbine manufacturers, investor-owned electrical utilities, and financial groups, as well as projects in developed urban areas.

Further information can be obtained from Michael Batham, Wind Office, California Energy Commission, 1111 Howe Avenue, Sacramento 95825, or by phoning the commission at its toll-free number, 800-822-6228.

Cal-Am to relocate water mains

California-American Water Co. is relocating two water mains, a 12-inch (installed in 1885) and a 24-inch (installed in 1908), for the city of Carmel.

The water mains currently run diagonally within an easement across property which the city of Carmel purchased recently on Lincoln between 4th and 5th and on 5th between Dolores and Lincoln. The month-long project began Monday, Aug. 17. Streets are subject to closure and traffic control from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and parking will be blocked off. The relocation work is being done by Granite Construction Co.

A California-American Water Co. spokesman said the company does not anticipate interruptions in water service during the construction period.

Carmel's Sam Downing knows how to save energy; will trek to Australia in October

By ROBERT MISKIMON

IF YOUR PG&E bill is $50 a month, then a 12 percent reduction through energy conservation is only $6. No big deal, right?

But if your energy consumption costs more than $40,000 a month and you can cut that by $4,000 or $5,000, that's a lot of money.

That is precisely how much money Sam Downing of Carmel has been able to chop off the PG&E bill at Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital, where he is associate administrator.

Downing was instrumental in reducing the hospital's energy bill by as much as $60,000 a year through a comprehensive energy management program approved and supported by the hospital's board of trustees.

While many of the techniques employed in the program seem "common sensical," they have yet to be implemented in many American hospitals and are consideed innovative enough to be presented in the form of a research paper at the 22nd International Hospital Congress in Sydney, Australia, Oct. 18-23.

Downing will travel down under with his wife, Paula, to present his paper to the convention which will be attended by representatives of 62 nations. Because of the success of the energy management program at Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital, Downing's work may well become an industry trend-setter.

•

HOSPITALS ARE AMONG the largest consumers of energy, and are, as Downing puts it, "the first place PG&E calls when they have an overload, to see what we can shut off." Other large energy users are industrial and manufacturing plants.

But many of the concepts and methods used in management of hospital energy can be applied to homes and to other commercial plants, Downing said.

"The first thing to do is to call PG&E to get an energy audit," he said. "They will gladly do an energy audit for any school or large energy user — and for homes. We work very closely with PG&E.

"A lot of our methods are applicable not only in other hospitals but also in other commercial buildings and in residences. It's tougher to cut energy use in a hospital because there are certain requirements for hospitals that consume lots of energy. For example, there has to be a certain amount of air exchange in certain areas of a hospital."

SAM DOWNING of Carmel, associate administrator of Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital, is to present a paper on energy management in Australia in October.

Impetus for the energy-reducing steps taken at Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital was provided by an energy audit by Med-Equip, a technical subsidiary of the Northern California Hospital Council which conducted energy audits of 22 hospitals in Northern California last year.

With an initial expenditure of about $200,000 for energy-saving devices, Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital expects to have recovered those costs within four years and to continue saving energy every year, Downing said.

•

HIS INTEREST in energy conservation grew more out of a desire for cost-effectiveness than anything else, Downing noted. He holds a master's degree in both business administration and public health, and is charged with supervision of 15 departments at the hospital.

"I just took an interest in energy management from the standpoint of cost containment. I formed a committee and we started reviewing the basics to see what could be done to reduce our energy consumption."

Working with the consultants brought in through the Northern California Hospital Council, Downing and his committee were able to pinpoint certain areas of savings. One of the first and most obvious decisions was simply to turn off lights when not needed.

"We went through and looked at our big pieces of equipment," Downing said. "We operate a 200-ton cooler, and we decided we could cut our energy use by putting smaller cooling units in certain areas and just operating them as needed.

"One future plan we have is to look at an automated computer system to turn the machinery and lights on and off all over the hospital as needed. This would turn off lights in certain non-patient areas when they're not needed and turn off motors for certain periods."

An initial success was achieved with installation of an automated computer boiler control system at Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital.

•

DOWNING BELIEVES the necessity for energy conservation will dawn upon most Americans as they feel the impact of higher energy prices on their wallets. Jimmy Carter's ill-fated attempt to galvanize the people for "the moral equivalent of war" in the energy struggle may have been more a result of public ignorance than political mismanagement, Downing believes.

"The oil embargo to the United States during the winter of 1973-74 which precipitated the 'energy crisis' brought energy management to public view," Downing says in his paper, "Energy Management: Challenge of the 80's" to be presented in Australia.

"The roots of our energy troubles, however, go back to trends in production and consumption of energy that have persisted for some time. In the United States, as in the rest of the world, we have not truly had an energy crisis. What we have had is an energy discomfiture."

Another practice which has brought results at Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital is the replacement — wherever possible — of incandescent lights with flourescent light, which consumes considerably less electricity.

Heat produced by boilers is recycled to heat the water going into patients' rooms and to provide heat to the laundry, further reducing energy use, Downing said.

There are many other ways, short of computerizing your home or office, to save energy. These include insulation and checking for waste, he added.

"Public attitudes about energy will change as the costs go up," Downing asserted. "There has to be some leadership at the national level to make significant changes in the way we use energy. Our energy programs haven't gotten the response they should have.

"But even if we're not going to get the direction we need at the national level, we still have to have a volunteer effort to make it work."

Any volunteers?

Pat is a generous and enthusiastic sharer. Prints from the old glass plates and negatives have appeared in many books about the Monterey Peninsula and in local newspapers and magazines.

The photographs have been exhibited frequently and Pat also gives slide/lecture presentations. Interior decorators frequently approach Pat to provide photo-murals (he has enlarged some plates to 44 square feet) and more than 40 restaurants and businesses display them.

In addition to his comprehensive Monterey Peninsula/Big Sur collection, Pat has many photographs taken after the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and many old picture postcards of the Monterey Penisnula.

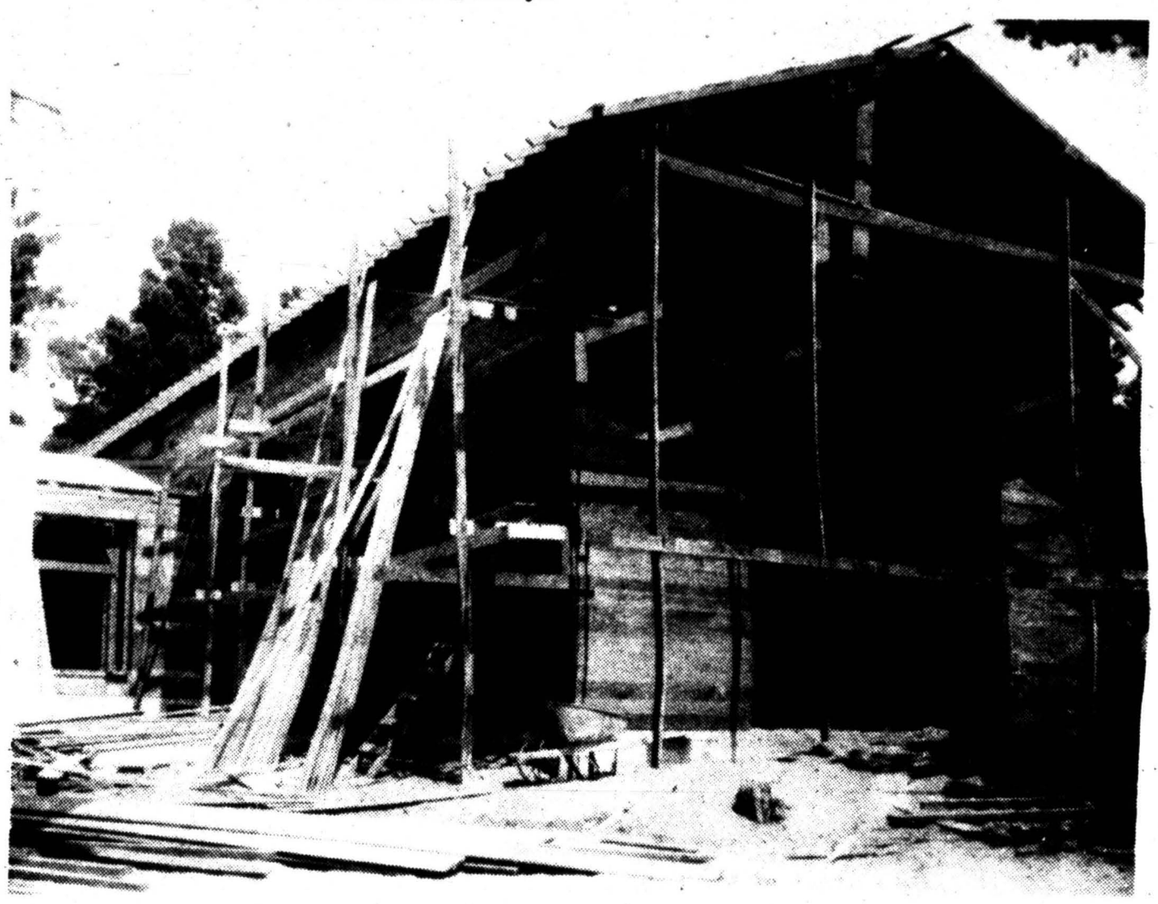
A photographer in his own right, Pat occasionally finds time to capture new buildings under construction or old buildings being demolished on the Monterey Peninsula. He particularly wants to record Cannery Row because so little of the original remains today.

But mostly he is searching for new negatives to acquire and rummaging through attics whenever he receives permission. Pat has a sense of history. "Old photographs," he says, "are the best record of what was here and how things are changing."

It gives us great pleasure to present a series of photographs which, we believe, have not been widely reproduced. We hope you enjoy them. The Editor.

THE HISTORY of this cabin, according to Pat Hathaway, is that it was built on Dolores Street shortly after the 1906 San Francisco earthquake by one of the many refugees from that devastated city. When Lewis Josselyn took this photo sometime between 1920-30, it was already a garment shop. The cabin also housed the Piccadilly Nursery, which is now only a memory.

THE ORIGINAL Del Monte Lodge in a photograph taken circa 1915. The log structure burned to the ground on Dec. 26, 1917.



LOOK AGAIN: it's not the mission, but Harrison Memorial Library taking shape at Ocean and Lincoln.

THE PINE INN grew up around this building, moved down to Lincoln from its original site at Mission and Ocean. The photograph was taken by Edgar A. Cohen of Alameda, one of the early photographers Hathaway calls "a real artist" who composed pictures rather than shooting snapshots.

IF YOU LOOK very carefully, you can see a sign half hidden behind a pine tree and a stooped figure between the two buildings. The sign reads "To be erected on this property/Carmel Theatre." The scene is Ocean Avenue below Monte Verde, circa 1920 in a Lewis Josselyn photograph.

Supervisors to name flood panel

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors is to appoint a seven-member committee Sept. 1 to study and make recommendations for flood control on the Lower Carmel River.

Supervisors will receive and study an $18,000 flood hazard study prepared by George S. Nolte and Associates for the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District at the same time.

That study presents five alternatives for flood control on the Lower Carmel River, from construction of concrete culverts to reinforcement of levees along the river channel.

Creation of a special assessment district to tax property owners in the floodplain area is recommended to finance the flood control measures eventually decided upon by property owners and county officials.

Area included in the flood study is the reach of the Lower Carmel River, from its mouth to the western end of the Rancho Canada Golf Club, about 11,000 feet upstream.

The seven-member advisory committee to be appointed by the supervisors will work with the flood district staff to analyze flood control alternatives and make recommendations for implementation.

Recommendations for appointments are to be made by Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley.

City Planning Director Bob Griggs likes to solve problems

By BABS COROVESSIS

CARMEL PLANNING Director Bob Griggs has lots of problems. And, he loves it that way. Griggs says if he didn't have the problems there would be no need for his job.

"My job is handling problems. I can't let the problems handle me," Griggs reflects, staring out the window of his tiny cubicle at City Hall.

He's been handling problems for quite some time — 15 years for the city of Carmel. For nine of those years he has been City Planning Director.

Griggs recalls that his first big break in life came at Fort Ord back in 1948 when a supply sergeant went AWOL and Griggs got his job because he could type.

He can still zing out a fast paragraph with his two-fingered system.

Griggs dealt with 28 different planning commissioners, including the seven now in office.

"You will always run into various conflicts in planning, or personalities who think differently. Also, often there are people who can't blend," he said.

Griggs finds himself "involved in the mainstream of government." Most of the people he has contact with are pleasant, Griggs said, because of what he calls "the high intellectual level of people in Carmel."

"Even those who are riled are sincere," Griggs added.

"I become the mediator between the private sector and government and try to find points where both will benefit.

"Here, we have to guard the character of the city so carefully that the private sector means a lot," he said.

THE BIGGEST DIFFICULTY is getting sufficient data for decision-makers to consider.

"I'm not in a position to sway people. I provide that background data and logic for the Planning Commission," Griggs pointed out.

In his administrative role, Griggs simply works to develop language for ordinances that are legal and enforceable.

"People forget, but need to understand, the Planning Commissioners are not authorities on planning and zoning law. Neither is the City Council, for that matter. Staff is. I am. Planning Commissioners and Council members serve for only a few years. Each existing commission or council interprets things and changes certain ordinances," Griggs added. He said changes occur simply because the wording of previous ordinances is seen in a different light.

He remembers some controversies more vividly than others.

"A thorny one was the big house issue that took about five years to resolve. It also was important because many of the zoning laws hadn't changed since 1929," Griggs recalled.

The Planning Commission and Council methodically altered ordinances affecting height, setbacks of buildings, amount of building coverage, height of buildings, fence heights, impervious materials and residential parking requirements. "All this came after a long study of large houses. The after effects of that issue still have not died down," Griggs noted.

Another hot one was the then proposed construction of Carmel Plaza in 1973. "With its inverted design, size and bulk and the amount of square footage for commercial use, it was difficult. However, the objections were not heard until the place was built," Griggs recalled.

Some objections resulted in reduced size and scale and lower building height, but Griggs said because the Plaza was built, "it ultimately caused a change in ordinances again in the commercial district.

"See, ordinances (laws) always come from an outcry of the public. It's the human outcry that causes zoning changes," Griggs pointed out.

Large crowds and loud cries don't sway Griggs, he claimed. "Logic and reason sway me," he added.

Acquisition of the Flanders/Doolittle property (now 34 acres of Mission Trails Park) was "one of the most moving things I've participated in. It was scheduled for a subdivision back in 1971. I discussed it with the City Council, and they ended up buying it for $475,000," Griggs recalled.

Griggs was born in Salem, Oregon, and grew up in Portland.

"That's what attracted me to Carmel — its beauty and people's sensitivity to the environment. The trees here remind me more of Oregon, except that they're not cutting them down for logging," said Griggs.

Griggs originally came to California when he was stationed at Fort Ord.

During this same period, Griggs was married. He worked as a newspaper pressman for 13 years, and quit to work for the city of Monterey as building inspector for nine months. Griggs returned to his pressman job for awhile before the city of Carmel snagged him to be their building inspector Aug. 15, 1966. He remained in that post until 1972 when he was named Planning Director.

Newspaper blood still in his veins, Griggs still moonlights as a pressman. In his spare time, he and his wife Ida play cards or go camping. Griggs has two sons, a daughter, a step-daughter and three grandchildren.

•

NOT UNLIKE the logging community that taught him to do everything for himself, Griggs today says, "I stand on my own two feet and take the issues as they come. I don't really form political alliances."

He said of the 28 planning commissioners he has worked with over the years, "the majority were pleasant to work with. Some you grow fonder of than others. Many have become longtime friends — Fred Keeble, Florence Josselyn and Dorothea Roberts," said Griggs.

In his problem-filled planning world, Griggs said things get stickiest "when the City Council decides that certain planning issues should be brought to their attention. Being the legislative body, they often interrupt the planning process. By that I mean that the Commission can lose track of existing things if it has to stop and take on hot issues of the Council," Griggs added.

One of the primary reasons for revision of the Carmel General Plan, Griggs said, "is to get out of firefighting issues and handle everything all at once. Doing that will save the City Council and the Planning Commission an enormous amount of time."

Griggs thought carefully a moment, then noted: "You know, planning is not totally a government role. What we do is work with all the ideas of the public — that includes elected officials who are part of the public. And once we get consensus, we develop a policy."

Council decides to forget restrooms in Piccadilly

A fast-acting City Council agreed last week there would be no restrooms in the new park on Dolores and to name it simply, "The Piccadilly."

The city still has to determine what kind of vegetation will go in the park, what kind of fixtures — such as benches or tables — should be installed.

Public suggestions are solicited at a meeting Thursday, Aug. 27 (tonight) at 7:30 p.m. in Room 10, Sunset Center, to be led by Gordon Andrews, landscape architect selected to develop The Piccadilly.

Mayor Barney Laiolo withheld support for the development of Piccadilly declaring, "You know how I feel about this whole issue."

Councilmember Helen Arnold initially favored a small office for the Carmel Business Association on the site, and also suggested public restrooms.

"If I worked for the CBA I would not want to be a custodian for that," Laiolo said.

"I sent people for 30 years to the Pine Inn," Brunn added, and said he felt there should not be any restrooms in Piccadilly.

The idea was dropped.

Andrews asked the council to defer naming the park. "I prefer to wait and see what people come up with," he said.

"I've been against this project all along. I will not vote on any plan you present," the mayor said.

The Council named the park anyhow. "Nobody has ever thought of it as anything but Piccadilly," Mrs. Arnold said.

•

COUNCILMAN MIKE BROWN said he wanted the park to have "as much greenery and trees as possible and be as close to nature as you can feel."

Mrs. Arnold suggested informality, with benches scattered in and out of the sun.

Councilman Frank Lloyd recommended that Andrews consider planting native shrubs. He said the park ought to be "low key," with a picket fence across its front.

Lloyd also said he thought the park should have no sprinklers — that the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club would take care of watering the plantings.

Mayor Laiolo told Andrews: "You're doing a good job. It's not going to be easy, I'll tell you that."

BURGLAR-PROOF SLIDING DOORS

Burglaries always increase during vacation periods when the homeowner is away. One of the favorite accesses is via the sliding glass door. Today's standard hardware for locking sliding doors is pretty flimsy and even an amateur will have no trouble in gaining entrance. But here's how you can outwit the culprit.

Cut a length of dowel (or broom handle) the right length and lay it in the track between the door and the opposite jamb. There is no way that sliding door can be slid without removing this wedge.

The groove at the top is twice as deep as the one on the bottom for easy removal. Foil this by cutting a piece of sood slightly less thick than the depth of the lower groove. Screw it into the upper groove, over the door when it's in locked position. Now the door can't be lifted out unless it is opened all the way.

Council, traffic panel try to get it together

THE CARMEL City Council and the traffic committee held a joint session Aug. 20 to iron out some problems. They decided to add another member to the committee and to funnel all traffic study items through City Hall.

The two panels also agreed that the three city staff members on the traffic committee are to be ex-officio (non-voting).

Florence Mason, chairman of the traffic commission, was given a vote of confidence by Police Chief Bill Ellis, with agreement from the council.

The joint meeting was called at her request because the committee was unsure of its function after the City Council overruled several of the committee's findings and recommendations.

She acknowledged that she acted with the zeal of a relative newcomer who "thought we'd solve all Carmel's traffic problems."

Jim Bajari, city finance director and assistant city administrator, was appointed by Peterson to handle traffic problems and decide whether the committee or the full City Council should have jurisdiction.

Peterson stated that many issues come up repeatedly every few years and that a decision should be made on "how long an item can be considered. It is frustrating to have items that aren't going to die, but stay alive forever."

The committee was assured of participation in the General Plan study of traffic flow.

Double-parked trucks that block traffic came up for discussion. Councilman Howard Brunn noted that "the problem of trucks is solvable, but not easily." He said an ordinance was needed to force trucks to unload at certain hours. All deliveries should be made before 10:30 a.m. and the streets freed up for visitors and residents, he said.

Matters like one-way streets and a parking garage also would be addressed in the General Plan, the group decided.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold said "one-way streets should be considered." She recommended one-way south on San Carlos and one-way north on Dolores. "That would solve it," she added.

Brunn said the committee ought to get recent statistics on the ratio of ownership of compact vs. large cars and re-mark the zones of street parking to suit that ratio.

"I think we need to shift the number of spaces for compact cars," Brunn said.

Mrs. Mason told the council that the committee felt "our work was not appreciated." One example given was the recent committee recommendation that the walk-throughs on Ocean Avenue be closed. The council decided to leave them open.

MRS. ARNOLD cautioned the committee "not to do anything that makes Carmel conform to other cities. There are things that are part of the village character and charm. We are unique," she said.

"We're anti-signs, anti-curbs, anti-street lights. That's also part of our uniqueness. If there is an intersection or two with no sign, it's not a great sin," Mrs. Arnold added.

Mrs. Mason said, "We balance the way it was with the reality of the way it is. And the reality is, there is increased traffic on Ocean Avenue," she said, referring to recommended closure of the walk-throughs.

Peterson took responsibility for a communication breakdown on walk-throughs. "I am the newest newcomer here. I had no idea it was such an issue. I blew it."

When Mrs. Mason asked if the council trusted the committee to do its work effectively, several council members responded, "absolutely."

Councilman Brunn also said the city should find a way to put "bumps" on the streets to cut down speeding. "They're used all over the Peninsula, at Monterey Pennsula College and at Community Hospital and in the city of San Francisco."

Brunn has made the same suggestion repeatedly. The city administrator advised him several years ago that bumps were not legal on public thoroughfares.

School board drops bus fees, ups lunch prices

IF YOU'RE a student in the Carmel Unified School District, you can now ride to school on a bus for free, but have to pay more for your lunch in the cafeteria.

And, if you go out for after-school sports, you won't have to pay a fee this year.

The Board of Education, in final budget adjustments before school starts Sept. 8, juggled fees in several areas last week.

School lunches at the elementary level will be increased from $1 to $1.25, and at the secondary level from $1.15 to $1.40. Milk will cost a nickel more this year.

Because the district will be reimbursed by the state under AB 777 for pupil transportation fees, there will be no charge for taking the bus to and from school, trustees decided.

And there will be no athletic fees this year, even though the issue of whether graduation credit should be offered for particiaption in after-school sports remains unresolved.

Effect of the increase in school lunch prices will be to offset but not eliminate losses in the program.

"The lunch program will be somewhere between self-supporting and running a $7,000 deficit," explained business manager Robert Zampatti at the board's Aug. 18 meeting.

•

THE BOARD CHOSE to continue its full-scale lunch program with projected losses of $7,000 instead of severely curtailing the program and offering lunches only to those students who qualify for free or reduced price meals.

Estimated loss to the district of operating the smaller lunch program was $30,000 per year.

Under the meal program approved by the board, a student will be offered a complete lunch with five nutrition components. The student may select three of the five components and the district will still be eligible to receive state and federal reimbursement.

However, state and federal subsidies to school districts operating lunch programs this year will drop by about 14 cents per meal, Zampatti explained.

The district lost approximately $37,491 on its meal program last year, but would have lost $13,000 even if a price increase had been approved last September, Zampatti said. The price increase this year is intended to slow, but not necessarily eliminate, losses.

"If we're going to have a lunch program, we need to support it," remarked Trustee Ron Parravano.

"It is not the role of this board to subsidize lunches for students," disagreed Trustee Elizabeth Bell.

•

TRUSTEES VOTED to cancel bus transportation fees, originally scheduled to be increased from $25 to $27 per semester this year, when they learned about state reimbursement for transportation costs.

"Collection of transportation fees by the Carmel Unified School District would serve only to reduce the state transportation allowance," Supt. Bill Rand informed the board in a memo.

The board decided to gather more information on effects of granting graduation credit for participation in after-school sports before taking action, and trustees were divided in their views on the subject.

Bob Walthour, a physical education teacher at Carmel High School, told the board he was worried about possible reductions in staff which might result from extending credit for athletics.

"I'm concerned about reductions in the phys ed staff from granting credit," Walthour said. "What if we lose another teacher because of this? I don't like the intention of this. I'd feel like a regular scab if I were to come in and eliminate a regular teacher."

•

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL principal Marsha Kading submitted a report to the board which analyzed effects of granting phys ed credit for athletics.

"Several phys ed teachers who are also coaches feel that the purpose of physical education is to present the student with a program that satisfies the individual's needs for learning lifetime physical activities," Kading said.

"They believe that the elements of classroom teaching based upon sound educational philosophy are not always present in athletics, particularly when a lay coach is in charge of a sports program.

"Counselors believe that if credit is given for athletics, overcrowding in classes would be eased and students would have more opportunities to earn credit."

Conclusions presented to the board by the principal:

• If athletes are assigned to phys ed classes throughout the day but allowed not to attend class during the specific season of the sport, there will be students with unassigned time on campus during the school day. A study hall might be needed to provide supervision.

• If athletes are given credit for after-school sports and also given credit for phys ed, athletes would have an advantage in earning elective credits over non-athletes.

• Giving credit for athletics would result in a loss of district revenue to support the program from student fees, but would also reduce the financial burden on families of participants.

• Savings through a reduction in staff would be possible only if students are prohibited from taking a phys ed class during any semester during which they obtain phys ed credit for athletics.

"Granting credit for athletics could have some advantages for the athletes, but it is likely to cost the district at least the loss of student fees and possibly losses due to early graduation or increased campus supervision," Kading concluded.

"The elective program, including phys ed, could be hurt if many students are earning a significant number of credits through athletics. Under certain conditions savings are possible but only by cutting programs we would rather build than cut."

Trustee Barbara Sanford said granting credit for athletics "won't particularly affect the present phys ed program."

"This is a very cheap way to add another period to the Carmel High School program," said Trustee Elizabeth Bell.

"I think there would be a problem with the creation of free periods without supervision," said Trustee Ron Parravano. "User fees are what's at issue here. To begin eliminating user fees in one area would open the door to eliminating them in another."

Trustee Ken White said he figures the district could lose as much as $21,610 if athletic fees were wiped out.

"If we give credit for after school sports, some teachers do not have credentials. I really question the legality of giving credit for non-credentialed teachers," White said.

Board president Doyle Clayton said parents with whom he had discussed granting credit for phys ed were in favor of it.

"We might be better off looking at this situation down the road," Clayton said.

Report from Sacramento

Unlicensed contractors

IN MY LAST COLUMN I discussed those non-controversial, "technical" bills which occupy so much of the Legislature's efforts, but which generally go unmentioned in the media.

One of those measures, authored by Assemblyman Leo McCarthy, would seem to be but a minor refinement of the Labor Code. But there is an interesting story behind AB 1095, and that story began in Monterey and Santa Cruz counties just a few months ago.

Here is the background: The unlicensed contractor has been around ever state began licensing that industry in 1929. Typically, the unlicensed contractor will bid lower for a construction job than can the legitimate, licensed contractor. The unlicensed contractor frequently pays employees under the table in cash, and, of course, many employees who will work under such conditions are not as professional and competent as they should be.

Consumer complaints — even "horror stories" — about the unlicensed contractor are unfortunately common. Work is often not completed to specification, if at all. Many have already found out that shoddy, unsound construction is no bargain at any price.

But the consumer is not the only one who is defrauded by the unlicensed contractor. The government must pick up the tab if a worker is injured on a job and has no workers compensation insurance. With the squeeze on in public finance, these claims are an unreasonable burden on the taxpayers' money.

Finally, the legitimate, licensed contractor suffers because he or she cannot compete with the unlicensed contractor.

•

IN MAY AND JUNE of this year, agents from the Labor Commissioner's office and the contractors State License Board conducted a "sweep" of 191 construction sites, involving 198 contractors, in Santa Cruz and Monterey counties. The results of this pilot program — known as the Interagency Construction Enforcement ("ICE") project — are interesting, to say the least.

Of the 198 contractors checked, 13 were cited for being unlicensed, five were found to be "cashing out" by paying employees under the table, and 16 were issued stop-work orders for not paying employees workers compensation.

Total citations amounted to $253,000. Significantly, the total cost of conducting the sweeps was only about $10,000 — a fraction of the "income" derived from the actions. Thus, the ICE project is far more than just self-supporting.

What Assemblyman McCarthy's AB 1095 does, is stipulate that these penalties be deposited in a special enforcement fund so that the program can continue to fund itself. This bill, which I strongly support, has passed the Assembly and is now pending in the Senate.

If passed into law, our local pilot ICE project may well develop into a stable, statewide project that will ensure that the most successful businessman in the construction industry is not the one who cheats.

The ICE project is good for consumers, legitimate contractors, and the government, and AB 1095 deserves to be enacted.

For more information on this bill, or any other, please contact my office at 646-1980.

Library board study session on new building

The Harrison Memorial Library Board will hold a work/study session in the latter part of September to resolve exactly what will be housed in its new annex on Lincoln and 6th.

The board agreed to a session after its next board meeting to define its position on the city's plans for underground parking.

Board member Bernard Anderson said he had discussed the matter with City Administrator Doug Peterson and Mayor Barney Laiolo. The city is now making schematic drawings and getting cost estimates.

Now that the city owns three lots where the library annex will be built, the only unknown factor is if the Pine Inn, owners of an adjacent lot, plan to join in the project.

"They're just trying to see how much it is worth to everyone to participate," Anderson said.

He added that the city's purchase of the third lot recently "has possibilities for us — maybe a balcony. At least there is more freedom in design."

Library Director Peg Richter said she was well aware that the city is anxious to know how much square footage the library is going to use.

About tennis courts

Dear Editor:

I am concerned with the run-down state of the tennis courts at Carmel High School and Carmel Middle School. I understand that this is not a city matter but one that should be taken up with the school board.

The presence and availability of the courts is an asset to the whole community, not to just the students in school. That is good and proper since the whole community supports these facilities with tax money. However, it seems that a good number of tourists also enjoy those courts and the presence of the tourists does not benefit the general community. The tourists benefit the business community and I wonder if the business community contributes to the maintenance of those school courts?

Secondly, concerning the maintenance of the courts: after 18 months of close observation I have noticed no maintenance, aside from the emptying of the single trash barrel. Bolts in the fence become loose, a pipe comes out of its fitting and just a few minutes could restore the equipment to its correct state, weeds grow up through the fence and they are not cut down.

Is there no one on the staff assigned to those duties? Must the taxpayers form some volunteer committee to get those routine tasks done? Or do we need a special bond issue on the ballot?

Thirdly, maybe there is a small problem with vandalism but some youngsters may not be so reluctant to destroy something that looks like a wreck already. By taking care of the good things that we have, we give our young people the example of public trust that they need to see.

Appreciates city help

Dear Editor:

I would like to applaud the work of Howard Brunn, a Carmel City Council member, for his efforts in working with me to make Carmel accessible to the disabled and older population of this Peninsula.

As Director of Supportive Services here at MPC, three weeks ago, I took a group of disabled students to visit the Carmel Mission. One of the students was in a wheelchair and we encountered a horrendous problem with parking in that there is no parking available for the disabled at the Mission.

Recently, I had discussed this issue with Bernice Imylak who represents the Carmel Women's Club. With one phone call to Howard, we were able to obtain three parking spaces designated for the disabled at Sunset Center.

Upon phoning Howard this morning, and telling him of the similar problem at the Mission, he was willing and extremely cooperative in alleviating this problem. I received almost instantaneously a call from Doug Peterson, Carmel City Administrator, hastening to assure us that from this point on there will be parking for the disabled at Carmel Mission.

I also mentioned to Doug the number of trees that are in the middle of the sidewalk with no warning for people with any visual impairment. I suggested some visual clues to these obstacles.

I would like to thank these two gentlemen for helping us to make Carmel accessible to ALL people whether residents or visitors. Through the help of people like these, our society will indeed take into account all people regardless of physical disability.

Crossroads 'jungle'

Dear Editor:

Apropos Crossroads Shopping Center at Rio Road: Whether local people or tourists need, want or desire yet another place to browse, buy and eat, eventually will be proven if and whether they will be able to enter or leave this new jungle.

Highway 1 from Ocean Ave. intersection going south, has been a two-lane bottleneck forming well beyond Big Sur for years. On any summer day, it is bumper-to-bumper and becoming more so during the rest of the year with off-season travelers, RV's, etc.

With increased traffic flow to and from the Barnyard, Carmel Rancho Center, Post Office and office buildings, Long's, Sambo's, Safeway, Chevron, Holiday Inn, plus condos, etc., we now will have an additional 987 cars, that being the advertised parking spaces by Crossroads, all trying to enter or leave this rat race.

We can anticipate a formidable increase on our already overburdened highway.

Are county and city planners completely blind? We still have, I believe, the Odello proposal for developing the Carmel River area plus other plans in Carmel Valley.

Apart from the present incapacity to move traffic on our roads, now add to this the increased burden on utilities, when PG&E, Cal-Am and governments constantly urge us to conserve our energies, which we are warned are at or beyond the maximum.

It is difficult to believe these appeals when all those developments are approved and gasoline is burned up by an incessant stream of autos making a mockery of oil shortage.

City planners seem determined to destroy Carmel's natural beauty although some are vainly trying to undo past errors, too late.

Laub and etc. have taken over. Greed for the tax dollar, poor foresight and gratification of the insatiable appetite of the tourist for a taste of Carmel, has amounted to an overwhelming feast.

Soon there will be nothing left but warmed up leftovers and empty bellies.

New rules for new age

Dear Editor:

It was with great interest that I read your article on "Humanism" in the August 13, 1981 issue of the Pine Cone/Outlook.

As a fellow human being on this small planet and living in this fine country, I am concerned with the thinking of such groups as the Moral Majority and those who wish to limit our individual and collective freedoms and mold us all into their current thought. Often with disregard for the rights of all as stated in the Constitution and Bill of Rights.

The very documents that offered this country and its citizens the freedoms we cherish to this day. It is important at this time that every citizen re-educate himself in what these documents present and protect. To study their true meaning — remembering that if the rights of one person are stepped upon then the rights of us all are in jeopardy!

Call it the snowball effect — it has happened in many civilizations throughout history and more recently in Nazi Germany, where a small group was allowed a foothold and continued to grab for more until they were in complete control of Germany. This is not the time to sit back and allow any one group to gain unlimited powers. The Moral Majority has eaten of the meat of success and is hungry for more and more!

Let us detach ourselves and look at the Bible as an historical piece of literature written for and about a limited population of tribes over 2,000 years ago. This being the Old Testament on which the Fundamentalists draw much of their thinking. At that time the earth was sparsely populated, with little control over disease and a very small number of babies lived past birth, while adults often died in their youth.

For this reason the tribes' birth rate was all-important and the laws were so written for total stimulation toward a maximum birth potential. We now live in a different world, being eaten up alive from within by overpopulation. If you look carefully at every problem on this earth today you could see that it would be relieved by a dramatic reduction in population.

We can no longer depend upon science to alleviate the situation. We must therefore relieve this earth of this overpopulated burden. This will take a new thinking and a different set of rules, for a new age.

We can no longer depend upon the books written for ancient times to lead us blindly into this new future — we must open our minds, hearts and eyes to a new thinking that works for the problems of today and tomorrow.

And we must watch carefully any groups or individuals who would wish to make us all over in their image and under their limiting rules. The greatness of this country is the ability to be an individual of free thought and live within just laws written within the frame work of our wonderous Constitution and Bill of Rights.

A patriotic free citizen, standing tall, without fear of presenting his or her thoughts within a society who will listen with an open mind of "Live and let live."

A citizen does not have to stand on a box waving our glorious flag to prove his patriotism. We must think beyond yesterday and even today, to help this great experiment on this earth to work for the children of tomorrow. Freedom of thought and openness of spirit will help us all fly into the wonders of tomorrow as long as we are not shackled by those who would wish to make us all bow to the limits they would wish to impose upon individuality and freedom of thought and ways of living life.

Citizens, enjoy your freedoms and respect the freedoms of others who would be different, for that freedom of "differentness" is the imaginative treasure of America.

Defying the laws of economics is okay — sometimes

By AL EISNER

IN THE CONTINUING struggle to protect the fragile beauty of the Carmel/Carmel Valley and coastal areas, private property rights have to be tempered by concern for the public welfare. The laws of the marketplace usually prevail, but our elected officials and their appointees sometimes give too much — or too little — consideration to the economics of a proposed project. When the balance is upset, people get upset.

A quick tour of the headlines in this week's edition provides some examples.

• In Carmel, the Little family may be frustated in its attempt to rebuild (see p. 2) the aging Carmel Sands motel and Simpson's Restaurant. A law on the books for 20 years would limit them to 32 motel or time-share units on the property to replace the 43 they now operate.

• Despite the fact that the Odello family has farmed its land for decades and kept it in open space for the public to enjoy, a Coastal Commission staff report recommends that no development be permitted on the eastern acreage (see p. 2). Since it would seem impractical to continue to use the property for farming, just what are the Odellos supposed to do with their property?

• Meanwhile, in Carmel Valley, developers of Village Green, 22-unit condominium project in Carmel Valley Village have filed for Chapter XI in the bankruptcy court (see p. 3). A victim of high interest rates and a sluggish real estate market, they did not have the resources to market their condominium units as aggressively as the developers of Carmel Valley Ranch. The latter group advertised extensively in national magazines and out-of-town newspapers to lure buyers to their product. Meanwhile, the developers of the White Oak condominiums in Carmel Valley Village are building their condominiums (see p. 3) after beating off an appeal by opponents.

All three of the condo projects gained approval after vehement opposition and years of lengthy public hearings. In the end, of course, pent up demand for housing and lower interest rates will take care of sales problems. But, what about the cumulative effect of the growth on Carmel Valley?

•

THE CARMEL CITY Council prefers to govern by using the tactics of confusion, moratorium, delay and legal action to protect the legendary charm of Carmel.

The council now has another useful weapon in its arsenal: revision of the General Plan. The state has mandated that the city's out-of-date General Plan be brought into conformity with state law. While businessmen in Carmel keep trying to figure out what the rules are, the city lurches from side to side instead of moving forward.

The Mayor's Report

Your opinions wanted on Piccadilly

By BARNEY LAIOLO

IT'S YOU TURN now to speak out either in writing letters or speaking personally regarding your feelings about the Piccadilly property.

At last week's meeting, the majority of the Council voted to name the property "The Piccadilly." While the naming of the proposed park was not an agenda item, the majority of the Council decided that there apparently was no need for public input on the issue.

I personally feel the citizens are entitled to their views. It was also agreed that no public restrooms would be installed on the premises.

Other than the consideration for restrooms the issue at hand was to inform the landscape designer of the Council's feeling as to what type of development would be desired. Several different ideas were discussed by members of the Council but no concrete plan ensued.

•

ON THURSDAY, August 27th, in Room 10 at Sunset Center at 7:30 p.m. there will be a public meeting to present suggested plans and also for the benefit of all concerned citizens to speak up and express their thoughts about this piece of property.

I did not vote for any proposal. As you know from previous meetings, I believe the matter was not properly presented to the voters and that the whole issue should have gone back to them.

If the supporters of my ideas who originally called and were upset about the extravagant purchase of a 40x100 foot lot for over $400,000 for use as a park are still of the same mind, I will be happy to join with them in originating a referendum or an initiative to have this put back to the voters. Don't hesitate to call or come to the meeting and be heard!

In case you didn't know what's going on on Lincoln Street and Fifth Avenue with all the tearing up of streets . . . it is necessitated by the moving of water lines that currently rest under the property the city purchased on Dolores near Fifth. This is the property that the voters approved to be used for senior citizen housing. It has taken almost one year to get all the legalities settled.

Congratulations to the board and management of this year's Monterey County Fair. Well done!

Smilin' on
Mayor Barney

No bank or savings and loan can pay you more interest—or save you more taxes—on a new 1-year tax-saving certificate than Wells Fargo. Add to this the security and convenience of saving at a major bank, and the financial counsel of your own Personal Banker,™ and the Wells Fargo advantage is clear.

Thanks to Federal tax law changes, beginning October 1 Wells Fargo Bank is offering savers the opportunity to earn up to $1,000 in tax-free interest. Up to $2,000 for returns filed jointly. No bank or savings and loan can pay you more on this form of investment—or saves you more on taxes. Plus with Wells Fargo, there's the added dimension to saving that has made Wells Fargo the bank for serious savers.

Important Note.

The current high-yield instruments being offered by other institutions in conjunction with tax-savings certificates are not tax exempt. Yields on all tax-saving certificates, which are effective October 1, will be the same at all offering financial institutions as required by law.

A Personal Banker can help you decide.

The new tax-exclusion savings plan raises certain questions that are dependent on your individual financial situation. Should you seek maximum interest or tax relief? Is the tax-saver certificate right for you? These are questions that can't be answered in an advertisement. Your nearest Wells Fargo Bank has someone who can help you answer them personally—A Wells Fargo Personal Banker. A financial pro who can keep you informed about things like rates and maturity dates throughout the length of your certificate.

Your savings can buy bank services.

What's more, at Wells Fargo, your savings can qualify you for the impressive array of services known as the Golden Reward.™ Keep a $2,000 balance in a Wells Fargo Tax-Saver Certificate, and you get 10 valuable banking services, including interest on the funds you use for checking—with no service charges or fee. With the Golden Reward, you can actually "buy" things with your savings without spending a cent of them.

Long-term advantages.

Of course, Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty in the event of early withdrawal from a Tax-Saver Certificate. But where else is your money going to work for you in so many ways? Substantial interest on your savings; maximum tax relief; the safety and convenience of a major bank and the financial knowhow of a Personal Banker. Plus the Golden Reward—just about every service you'll ever need from a bank, with no service charges.

Stop by your nearest Wells Fargo Bank for more information.

Reception to open new documentary exhibit

An exhibition of photographs by Larry S. Ferguson, Frank Gohlke and Roger Martin will open with a preview/reception Friday, Aug. 28 at Friends of Photography Gallery, Sunset Center, Carmel. The public is welcome to the preview from 8-10 p.m.

The exhibit presents photographs made by three artists who depict the world in a direct, documentary manner, yet who have established strongly personal approaches to specific subjects. The resultant images provide records of the contemporary American environment, while expressing the artists' creative sensibilities.

Larry S. Ferguson has photogrpahed in the Omaha, Neb. area for the past four years. His carefully constructed black-and-white prints portray the experience of change in a contemporary mid-American city, revealing not only the contrast between new and old structures but the psychological complexity of the urban environment.

Ferguson received his BFA degree in 1977 from the University of Nebraska. After working for a year as archival photographer for the Adams County Nebraska Historical Society he became artist-in-residence at the Western Heritage Museum in Omaha. During 1980 his photographs were included in two thematic group shows at The Friends, The Diana Show and New Landscapes, Part I.

Frank Gohlke currently lives and teaches in Minneapolis. Widely recognized for his influence in photography, Gohlke received a Guggenheim Foundation Fellowship in 1975, a National Endowment for the Arts Photographer's Fellowship in 1977 and a Bush Foundation Artist's Fellowship in 1979.

His photographs have been a part of many important group exhibitions,including New Topographics (George Eastman House, 1975); Mirrors and Windows (Museum of Modern ARt, 1978); and American Images: New Work by Twenty Contemporary Photographers, a traveling exhibition sponsored by the Bell System (1979).

The black-and-white photographs displayed at The Friends of Photography were made in California in the fall of 1979 but have been printed for the first time this year.

Roger Mertin received a BFA degree from the Rochester Institute of Technology in 1965 and a MFA degree from the Visual Studies Workshop in 1972. Since 1973 he has taught photography at the University of Rochester. In 1974 he was the recipient of both a New York State CAPS Grant and a Guggenheim Fellowship. In 1976 he was awarded a Photographer's Fellowship by the National Endowment for the Arts.

Mertin's photographs have been included in a number of recent group exhibitions including The Great West: Real/Ideal at the University of Colorado (1977); Mirrors and Windows (1978); and One of a Kind: Recent Polaroid Color Photography (1980). One of his color prints was the subject of an essay by Gary Metz in 9 Critics/9 Photographs, published by The Friends in 1980.

The color prints in the current exhibit are from an extended series of photographs documenting the interiors and exteriors of eastern homes. Rich in content and demonstrating a subtle understanding of the impact of color, Mertin's photographs are derived from a firm, often ironic conceptual base.

The exhibit will remain on view through Sept. 27.

The gallery is open from 1 to 5 p.m. daily. For more information phone 624-6330.

DRIVING THE PILING by Larry S. Ferguson is one of a collection of works by the photographer to be exhibited Friday, Aug. 28 through Sept. 27 at the Friends of Photography Gallery, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. On exhibit with Ferguson's works are prints by Frank Gohlke and Roger Mertin. Gallery hours are 1-5 p.m. daily.

Walker Cup golf matches to be played at Spyglass

For the first time in its 32-year history the prestigious Walker Cup amateur golf matches will be played in California — at the Cypress Point golf course in Pebble Beach, Friday and Saturday, Aug. 28 and 29.

The oldest international competition in golf, the Walker Cup is played every other year between 10 member teams from the United States and the United Kingdom.

The event was last played in Muirfield, Scotland in 1979; the match was won by the U.S.

American team members are captain James Gabrielsen from Atlanta, Ga; Bob Lewis Jr. from Warren, Ohio; Jody Mudd, Louisville, Ky.; Hal Sutton, Shreveport, La;, Jim Holtgrieve, Des Peres, Miss.; Ron Commans, West Lake Village; Frank Fuhrer, Pittsburg, Pa.; Corey Pavin, Oxnard; Dick von Tacky, Titusville, Pa.; Joe Rassett, Turlock; and Jay Sigel, Burwin, Pa.

Matches begin at 8:30 a.m. both days. Tickets are $6 per day or $10 for two days. They are available at the pro shops of Pebble Beach, Spyglass Hill, Cypress Point, Monterey Peninsula Country Club and Pacific Grove golf courses. They also will be sold on the course the day of the event.

The Cypress Point golf course is on 17 Mile Drive in the Del Monte Forest. There is a $4 gate fee.

For more information phone the Cypress Point golf club at 624-6444.

Carmel author turned notes into stories

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

ESTELLE URBAHNS is a woman who knows her own mind.

"Attitude is everything," she said. "If you think 'old' then you become old — but thinking can also keep you young. The mind can work miracles, but it needs our help along the way."

Mrs. Urbahns, a longtime resident of Carmel, is a much-honored writer of short stories for both pre-school and pre-teen readers.

When asked her age, her eyes twinkled as she replied: "Oh, I don't think about that anymore. Age has nothing to do with my keeping busy. I never find the time to be bored."

Her recently completed book, The Courage of Singing Boy (about a Navajo boy and his dog) has just been published, and her many friends are planning an autograph party at the Thunderbird Book Store on Sunday, Aug. 30, from 2:30-4:30 p.m.

The book was first published many years ago in Wee Wisdom as a short story. It was later placed on the best-seller list of short stories and was part of a school reader for many years. Two years ago she decided to turn the short story into a book.

"My husband was very ill and in a wheelchair at the time," she explained. "So, I had to just take my time with the writing. He was such a grand person that I wanted to spend all of my time just trying to make him comfortable." Her husband died last year at age 99.

Born in Montana, Mrs. Urbahns became a school teacher and worked in the profession until two years after she was married. Her husband was one of 10 scientists sent to Florida to study the Medfly problem in the 1940's.

"They didn't mess around with it," said Mrs. Urbahns. "In two months he came home and said 'I think we've solved the problem.'"

Mrs. Urbahns has one daughter, Barbara Blaser, who now lives just north of Sacramento.

"Barbara was the reason I started writing," said Mrs. Urbahns, adding that she always wanted to become a writer. "We spent a lot of time together and so many little situations would come up. So I just started taking notes and told myself that one day I would turn those notes into stories."

HER FIRST BOOK was published in 1930. Since that time her works have appeared in such publications as Child's Garden, Juniorama, The Children's Page of the San Francisco Examiner, Trails for Juniors, Wee Wisdom and Story Art, a national magazine for professional story tellers.

One of her stories, Gifts From The Sea, won second award in a contest sponsored by the National League of Penwomen. Her story, Candle in the Window was re-published in the Golden Anniversary Issue of Story Art. And Best Stories of the Year listed the Indian tale which was the nucleus of the present work.

In her book, The Courge of Singing Boy, the Navajo lad and his little dog Jump Around are inseparable. With the family on the road to a great tribal celebration, and a competitive "Sing," the conscience of Singing Boy is suddenly smitten by the realization that he has forgotten to leave the life-giving water for his pet.

The brochure on the book reads: "His return at night, alone in the dark, forbidding desert, foregoing the initial joys of the Indian festival, and the almost miraculous reward for this brave act, combine to make Singing Boy a young character to remember with affection."

'I never find the time to be bored.'

In 1943, when E.P. Dutton published a total of 41 titles they made the following statement to librarians: "Of all these titles, we give special mention to seven. Heading the list, we place The Tangled Web by Estelle Urbahns."

And when the California Writers Club published in its monthly bulletin a list of 20 outstanding writers — going back 100 years — Estelle Urbahns' name was included.

"Reworking Singing Boy was fun," said Mrs. Urbahns. "I spent a lot of time improving, changing and altering the story. It took a lot of time but I have a beautiful patio to work on and I think that Carmel must be one of the most beautiful places on earth."

Although she doesn't get out much, Mrs. Urbahns has a "helper" who visits with her four or five times each week and takes her to do her errands.

An avid reader, she is a serious student of metaphysics. She said she especially enjoys reading books by Emmet Fox, Manly P. Hall and works on Edgar Cayce.

When asked if she enjoyed any special hobbies she replied: "Yes — writing!" And she's already thinking about another book.

AN AUTOGRAPH PARTY Sunday at The Thunderbird Book Store will celebrate the publication of Estelle Urbahn's new book, The Courage of Singing Boy. The author, a longtime resident of Carmel, is a much-honored writer of children's books.

An ounce of prevention

Alcohol

By RALPH RETHERFORD, M.D.

IN THE UNITED States, roughly one-third of the adult population abstains from alcohol or rarely takes a drink. Another third consume up to three drinks a week. The remaining third consume four or more drinks a week, and possibly as many as one third of these have been categorized as problem drinkers or alcoholics.

In real numbers, this boils down to something more than 10 million problem drinkers in our nation's adult population and roughly three million problem drinkers among teenagers under the age of 18. In percentages this amounts to roughly seven percent of our adult population and as much as 19 percent of youths having problems with alcohol.

So, you can see at a glance that the problem with alcohol in our country is a very significant one, affecting roughly one out of 10 people. What is the cost of this to our society? Alcohol abuse costs us roughly $50 billion a year.

What is problem drinking, and where is the line between enjoying yourself socially with a drink and becoming a problem drinker? It's difficult to say exactly how much alcohol consumption constitutes problem drinking. Some individuals handle alcohol much better than others, both physically and mentally, and can get away with consuming amounts that would cause another person serious problems.

However, most authorities agree that if a person is consuming four or more drinks a day he or she is probably a problem drinker. I am frequently asked in my medical practice "how much alcohol is it okay for me to consume?" I advise my patients to take in no more than two drinks a day. This means two beers, two glasses of wine, or two standard one-ounce highballs. Alcohol consumption in excess of this can lead to problem drinking and a myriad of health problems.

•

LET'S TAKE A LOOK now at the way excessive alcohol use affects the body. Alcohol begins causing problems when it enters your mouth. Heavy drinking increases the risk of cancer of the tongue, mouth, throat, esophagus (the tube that you swallow through), voice box and liver. Here in the United States, cancer at these sites represents roughly 10 percent of all cancers, possibly reflecting the fact that roughly 10 percent of our population abuses alcohol.

From the esophagus, the alcohol passes into the stomach where it causes a high incidence of gastritis or inflammation of the stomach lining. This is one of the most common causes of bleeding from the gastrointestinal tract. It also causes ulcers to form which can bleed, rupture, or cause blockage of the intestines. Here in the small intestine, the alcohol is absorbed into the system and passes to the liver where it does perhaps its worst damage. Here it causes conditions called alcoholic hepatitis (which is an inflammation of the liver) and cirrhosis (which is a chronic scarring process in the liver). Cirrhosis of the liver was the seventh most common cause of death in the United States in 1976.

Also affected is the pancreas, a small but important organ in the abdomen which produces the powerful digestive enzymes necessary for digesting the food that you eat. Heavy alcohol use may cause the pancreas to become inflamed, causing a very painful illness known as pancreatitis. This is a very serious illness which can have a fatal outcome or cause serious complications.

•

APART FROM THE gastroinestinal tract organs, alcohol has many other negative effects on the body. Excessive use may cause impotency or early onset of the menopause. Just about everyone knows that alcohol affects your judgment, and people who are under the influence are well advised not to operate a motor vehicle or machinery as they are much more likely to have an accident.

In addition, alcohol may cause inflammation of the heart muscle, but more importantly, it is one of the most common causes of high blood pressure. Fortunately, the high blood pressure that is associated with alcohol overuse usually goes away when you stop drinking.

How about the mental state of problem drinkers? There is a high association between alcoholism and depression and unfortunately when depressed people resort to alcohol, they frequently become more depressed both as a direct effect of the alcohol on their nervous system, and as a result of the additional problems that alcohol abuse brings to their lives. In line with this, it has been observed that more than one third of suicides involve alcohol.

Pregnant women of course should not drink, as the fetal alcohol syndrome has been discovered in recent years. These are infants born to women who have abused alcohol during their pregnancy who may show various mental and emotional problems, problems with growth, and birth defects.

•

IS THERE ANYTHING good about using alcohol? Evidence supports the idea that in most individuals one or two drinks a day will not result in any of the above problems. Alcohol consumed in small quantities may even be beneficial, as it helps in reducing stress, and sometimes performs the important social function of helping people to relax and socialize more easily.

Small amounts of alcohol have also been shown to favorably affect the blood cholesterol, increasing the so-called "good" kind of cholesterol, high-density lipoprotein.

If you have an alcohol problem, or have a family member who has an alcohol problem I strongly recommend that you contact one of the several excellent alcohol rehabilitation programs here in our area.

Until next week . . . .

Arthritis workshop is Sept. 2

The Arthritis Foundation has scheduled a free arthritis workshop for Wednesday, Sept. 2. The public is welcome.

The workshop will begin at 10:30 a.m. in the Redwood room at Del Mesa, on Carmel Valley Road, about two miles east of Highway 1.

Nancy Malinowski, a registered physical therapist, will discuss physical therapy and arthritis. Karol Orr, a registered occupational therapist, will discuss work simplification, joint protection and hand splinting; she will demonstrate adaptive equipment.

Cypress swimmers in Colorado

Three members of the Cypress Swim Club in Carmel Valley are attending a special training program for synchronized swimmers at the invitation of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Sarah Atkinson of Pacific Grove and Cindy Cornford and Pavia Wald of Monterey are in Colorado Springs until Aug. 29.

The team was invited after the Senior National Synchronized Swimming Championships last month at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The six-girl team made it to the semi-finals in the competition.

Team members unable to attend were Suzy Hermanson (Carmel Valley), Brenda LaMica (Carmel), Diana Marks (Pebble Beach), and Kerry Wald (Carmel).

The Cypress Swim Club is now auditioning new members for the coming season. For further information regarding the newest Olympic sport, interested swimmers between the ages of 8 and 18 should phone 659-2446 or 372-5648.

Sierra Club plans bike trek to Salinas

The Ventana chapter of the Sierra Club will sponsor a bike ride from Monterey to Salinas and back Saturday, Aug. 29.

Bicycle enthusiasts should meet at 9 a.m. in the Moose Lodge parking lot, 550 Canyon Del Rey Road in Del Rey Oaks, and bring water and snacks. There will be a stop in Salinas for a restaurant lunch.

For more information phone 375-3622.

Book, art sale at Cherry Hall

The Cherry Foundation plans a book and art sale for Saturday, Aug. 29 in Cherry Hall, 4th and Guadalupe, Carmel, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Featured will be paintings, original wood engravings and etchings, other prints and posters, and books of all kinds from paperback bargains to rarities and collectors' items. For more information phone 624-7491.

Dogs serve the blind

By JUDITH A. EISNER

The role of the dog as a leader for the blind is one of his most useful services to mankind. There are mentions throughout ancient history of faithful dogs leading their blind masters, but it was during World War II that the specialized training of dogs to lead the blind first began in this country.

The first organization set up for the breeding and training of such dogs was The Seeing Eye Foundation in Morristown, N.J. It based its operation on training methods used in Switzerland.

Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., in San Rafael is another organization that came into being during World War II. There is a certain protective jealousy about the use of the terms "Guide Dog" and "Seeing Eye Dog," with each name being used only for dogs from the respective organizations.

Through years of selective breeding and experimentation, often fraught with failure, the Guide Dogs organization decided on three breeds best suited for the task of leading blind people. They are the German Shepherd, the Labrador Retriever and the Golden Retriever.

In recent years, Guide Dogs, has produced most of the dogs they use for guides and maintains extensive kennel facilities and a "stable" of brood batches and stud dogs. Because there are special qualities desired in future Guide Dogs, careful breeding records have been kept. Through the years, the number of successful Guide Dogs produced from each successive litter of puppies has risen, proving that these traits can be selectively bred for.

Qualifications for a successful Guide Dog include intelligence, trainability, stable temperament, willingness to work, medium size and the ability to make independent decisions. After years of study, it was found that the three breeds now used became the most successful Guide Dogs.

The life of a future Guide Dog usually begins in the San Rafael kennels, where mother and puppies are kept together until weaning at six weeks of age. During those first six weeks, knowledgeable people at the organization keep tabs on the development of the puppies. Each puppy is marked with a shaved "blaze" on shoulders, back or hips to identify him from his littermates.

At six weeks, the puppies begin to undergo the famous Guide Dogs "puppy testing."

These are a series of simple tests designed to show the puppy's character, stability and trainability. Women volunteers at Guide Dogs often do the testing.

Typical tests include judging the puppy's tractability at being put on a leash for the first time, encountering a flight of steps, and having a two-wheeled cart suddenly pushed at him. The puppies are tested on their willingness to "come" when called, on their agility at walking over mesh screening and their response to sudden noises.

These tests have been carefully devised to give the best all around "work-up" on the puppy's character in view of his future work. Clumsy or stubborn puppies, or those that react strongly to sudden noises or frights are not the stuff Guide Dogs are made of.

Puppies that pass this early testing period then go home to grow up. The homes they go to are those of qualified 4-H Club youngsters who, as special projects, undertake to raise and train Guide Dog puppies until they are a year old. This arrangement permits the organization to place young dogs in carefully chosen home environments where they will be properly cared for and trained by dedicated and capable youngsters.

At home with their 4-H masters, the puppies attend basic obedience classes which teaches them to come, sit, heel, lie down and stay on command. Their temporary masters are also instructed to take the puppies to different places so they will be accustomed to normal everyday traffic, noises, pedestrians and other experiences.

Then comes the day when the puppy is no longer a baby, but a mature dog ready for the serious business of life. Proudly but sadly, their masters return the dogs to Guide Dogs for the Blind headquarters.

Back at their home kennel, the dogs begin an intensive training period with state-licensed instructors. Their basic obedience training is polished to perfection and they are presented with many new lessons to learn.

The dogs must be taught to judge obstacles which present hazards to sightless persons and to make decisions contrary to their master's commands — in short, to think for themselves. The value of this independent decision-making can be seen when a blind master orders a dog to go forward when a car is coming around a corner. A Guide Dog will see the car and refuse to proceed; and a blind person learns to trust his dog's "disobedience."

The final test in a Guide Dog's training occurs when his instructor dons blindfolds and goes out into downtown San Rafael traffic with his dog. The instructor literally places himself in the dog's care, just as a blind person must. But after months of careful and thorough training, the results are almost always successful.

Guide Dogs are assigned to their potential new masters when they come to the school for an intensive four week training session. During this time, man and dog work and learn together and also live together at the school residence facilities. The men and women who have come to receive a Guide Dog learn about feeding and caring for the dog, and learn very quickly to love and trust it. (There is never a charge made to a blind person for the dog or the training.)

After successful completion of their courses, a gala graduation is held at Guide Dogs, in which the young 4-H puppy raisers officially present the dogs to their new masters. Although Guide Dogs officially remain the property of the organization, they usually stay with their new masters for the rest of their life, often living on as loved pets after retirement when a new Guide Dog has come to fill their role.

Free cooking demonstrations

If you like your souffles a la Grand Marnier and your chicken "borrachos" the Cooks Club will show you how to make them Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 29 and 30.

The preparation of a Grand Marnier souffle will be demonstrated Saturday from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. and 1-3 p.m.

The preparation of "pollo borrachos" — Mexican "drunken chicken" — will be demonstrated Sunday, Aug. 30 at the same times.

All demonstrations are free, at the Peppercorn restaurant, the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel.

For more information phone 625-0100.

A whale of a program

A slide program on whales will be presented by the Monterey Bay chapter of the American Cetacean Society Friday, Aug. 28 at 7:30 p.m.

Capt. Thomas Collins, (USN ret.), treasurer of the National board of directors of the society, will present the program, which will concentrate on whales off the coast of Newfoundland in Canada.

The show will be presented in the Monterey Boat Works of the Hopkins Marine Station on Ocean View Boulevard in Pacific Grove.

Admission is free and the public is invited. For more information phone 375-5931.

Backgammon

Go for broke

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 4-2 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

You must, of course, hit the blot on your 9-point with the four. The only question is how to play the two.

If you're conservative (pronounced "timid") you will move the other man from your midpoint to your 11-point; or perhaps you will move in your home board from the 6-point to the 4-point. These moves do no great harm, but they also do no great good.

If you're enterprising (perhaps pronounced "reckless"), you will keep going after hitting the blot, finishing on your bar point.

The idea is to give yourself the maximum chance to cover the blot on your 1-point (shutting West out) if he fails to come in. If he does come in, hitting your blot, you must re-enter your man on his 4-point; and then you want the best possible chance to hit his blot on your 1-point.

If Black hits the blot on your 1-point at your next turn, your chances are not very good. If he hits, and you fail to come in, he will double; and you should probably drop. Therefore your best chance to win the game is to concentrate on putting Black out of action if he fails to hit you at his next turn. For this purpose, station a blot on your bar point and hope that you can cover your 1-point before Black manages to come in.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Deaths

Albert Guerard

Albert Sidney Guerard of Pebble Beach died Aug. 22 at his home after a long illness. He was 72.

Before retiring to the Peninsula in 1970, Guerard worked for Standard Oil as a chief engineer in Richmond, and as general manager of a refinery in Mississippi.

He served as lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Marine Corps during World War II.

He was a member of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club and served on the board of Carmel Valley Manor.

He is survived by his wife, Mary; his brother, William of Fair Oaks; and several nieces and nephews.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, P.O. Box 7236, Carmel or the donor's favorite charity.

Muriel Lewis

Muriel V. Lewis, former longtime resident of Carmel, died July 4. She was 95.

Mrs. Lewis lived in Carmel from 1953-56 and 1959-1977. She moved to Jamul, near San Diego in 1977.

She was active in the Carmel Foundation, the YWCA and served in France during World War I.

She is survived by daughters, Joan Lewis Johnson of Fallbrook and Ann Brackett Wahl of San Diego, seven grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

The family suggested memorial contributions to the Save the Children Foundation, CARE, the Carmel Foundation or the International Red Cross.

John Molteni

John Rico Molteni, a Carmel resident for the past 69 years, died at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital after a period of failing health. He was 95.

Molteni worked for the city of Carmel for 50 years with the street department and as a volunteer firefighter.

His wife, Mary, died in 1941.

Survivors include sons, John M. of Pacific Valley and Anthony Henry of Monterey; daughter, Isabelle Sandberg of Ben Lomond; and seven grandchildren.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Memorial contributions may be sent to the donor's favorite charity.

Matthew Altavilla

Matthew T. Altavilla, 2-week-old infant son of Vincent Altavilla and Patricia Whitehead of Carmel Valley, died at Community Hospital shortly after being admitted.

The baby, born July 31 at the hospital, became ill at home, and succumbed to a congenital disease.

In addition to his parents, the infant is survived by grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Whithead of La Mirada and Marian Gilmer of Marian.

Mission Mortguary was in charge of arrangements.

OFFERING

THE ALTERNATIVES

(a new approach to funeral service)

A selection of services uniquely compatible with contemporary thinking.

"THE PINE"...Cremation without services

"THE CYPRESS"...Cremation with memorial service

"THE OAK"...Burial without formality

"THE MAPLE"...The traditional Service

PREPLANNING IS A LOGICAL PART OF THIS CONCEPT

The advantage of "The Alternatives" is its unlimited flexibility. It can be traditional or contemporary... with or without ritual...small or large...indoors or outdoors...religious or not...whatever the family feels should be the appropriate tribute.

This event is open to the public, free of charge. Wine and cheese will be served. The YWCA is located at 276 El Dorado, in Monterey. For more information, phone 649-0834.

Father Farrell's wisdom

The Hospice — in the Carmel tradition

Invocation to the Carmel Rotary Club
June 3, 1981

Two hundred and eleven years ago today, on June 3, 1770, the venerable Franciscan from Petra de Mallorca, Padre Junipero Serra and the vibrant and good-natured Catalan Don Gaspar de Portola took possession of California and made Monterey the capital of both Baja and Alta California.

They also founded the Mission of San Carlos de Borromeo which was moved to Carmel the next year and the church where Padre Serra now lies buried.

Oh Lord, bless California as you blessed the cross of Serra and the sword of Portola this day so long ago.

Padre Serra bent down and touched with his hands and his heart the despised and primitive Carmel Indians whom the Spaniards said only a saint could love. Padre Serra did give them love; they knew it and they felt it and they came to sit for hours and bask in the rays of that love.

Once again men and women in the Carmel Valley at the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, 8900 Carmel Valley Road are reaching out and grasping hands and touching hearts of those facing inevitable death alone Often, like Padre Serra's Indians, they are frightened, insecure and confused. Sometimes they strike out in rebellion against God and man, consumed with jealously against others who are not ill. They even turn against those trying to help them.

Padre Serra said that in the face of every disturbed Carmel Indian he saw the face of Christ. Padre Serra's Indians felt his love in their very bones and the guests of the Hospice feel that same kind of love.

Oh Lord, continue to inspire the founder, members and supporters of this noble effort in the true tradition of Carmel.

Finally, Feliz cumple anos, paisanos . . . saludes, peso y besos, embracos, un vase de vino y amor. A happy 211th birthday, paisanos . . . health, happiness, pesos, a jug of vino and love (the love of God, that is,) and the time to enjoy them. Come and eat and drink . . . it's later than you think. Amen.

What's at the movies

American Werewolf in London: John Landis' film with many full moons, foggy moors, rotting corpses and howling werewolves. "The horror movie to end all horror movies." Rated R. At the Cinema 70.

Arthur: A comedy with Dudley Moore playing a happy millionaire drunk. Also with Liza Minnelli and John Gielgud. Rated PG. At the Center Cinemas.

Blow Out: Brian DePalma's latest film — a political thriller with John Travolta as a movie sound man who records the death of a politician which he believes to be murder. With Nancy Allen. Rated R. At the Hill Theatre.

Clash of the Titans: An adventure about Greek gods. With Laurence Olivier as Zeus, Maggie Smith, Claire Bloom and Harry Hanlin as Zeus' son Perseus who battles wild beasts. Rated PG. At the Regency.

Dragonslayer: An overconfident sorcerer's apprentice, played by Peter MacNicol, sets out to slay the mighty dragon Vermithrax, who has been devouring virgins in this rather un-Disneylike Disney film. Rated PG. At the Hill Theatre.

Endless Love: The latest film from Franco Zeffirelli, stars Brooke Shields and Martin Hewitt as a pair of teenagers who find true love, but are forced to separate. Rated R. At the Valley Cinema.

Escape From New York: New York City in 1997 is a giant penal colony ruled by its prisoners. No one who enters may leave the city. The plot centers around a mission to rescue the President of the United States, who is being held hostage inside the city. With Kurt Russell, Ernest Borgnine, Donald Pleasance and Isaac Hayes. Rated R. At the Golden Bough.

Eye of the Needle: A suspense adventure with Donald Sutherland as a Nazi spy in England during World War II, who has an ill-fated love affair with Kate Nelligan. Rated R. At the Dream Theatre.

First Monday in October: A dramatic comedy about the first woman justice, a conservative from Orange County, who clashes with a liberal justice on a controversial obscenity case. Stars Jill Clayburgh and Walter Matthau. Rated R. At the Carmel Village Theatre.

The Four Seasons: A romantic comedy about intimate friendships. Starring Alan Alda and Carol Burnett. Rated PG. At the Valley Cinema.

Heavy Metal: Animation and heavy metal rock music are combined with adventure stories about deep space and futuristic New York and beyond. Each story is dominated by the evil Loch-nar, a "glowing green sphere whose power infects all times, all galaxies, all dimensions." Music is by Black Sabbath, Blue Oyster Cult, Cheap Trick, Devo, Journey, Nazareth, Grand Funk Railroad and more. Rated R. At the Golden Bough Theatre.

Monty Python and the Holy Grail: Bizarre, offbeat comedy taken after the format of the British-produced TV show, Monty Python and the Flying Circus. A series of satiric sketches set in a lunatic kingdom, with authentic Scottish castles, lochs and moors. Rated R. A Fri. late show and Sat. afternoon show. At the Dream Theatre.

The Night the Lights Went Out in Georgia: The adventures of an aspiring country singer who tries to make it big in Nashville. With Kristy McNicol and Mark Hamill. At the Hill Theatre.

Raiders of the Lost Ark: Written by George Lucas and directed by Steven Spielberg. Harrison Ford plays Indiana Jones, an archeologist and adventurer who somehow survives while his adversaries are impaled on steel spikes, poison darted, dispatched by an airplane propeller and even melted while competing to find the Ark of the Covenant. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: A stereotype horror/science fiction movie about the sexual confusion of two normal teenagers and a tranvestite from another planet. Sat. midnight show. At the Dream Theatre.

Saturday the 14th: A spoof on horror movies, this film stars Richard Benjamin and Paula Prentiss as a happy couple who inherit a creepy mansion in Eerie, Pensylvania. All the monsters have been seen in other horror films—a mummy, vampires, the Bride of Frankenstein, the Creature from the Black Lagoon and more. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

Superman II: In this new adventure, Superman battles three outlaws from Krypton, who have his same super powers. The love story between Superman and Lois Lane also continues. Christopher Reeve is Superman, Margot Kidder is Lois Lane and Gene Hackman is villian Lex Luthor. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

The Wanderer: French surreal fantasy based on the novel by Alain Fourmier. Set in the 1890s. Rated R. Sunday, 1 p.m. only. At the Dream Theatre.

Buehr exhibits at Sunset Center

Works by Camilla Buehr will be on exhibit in the Sunset Center Theater foyer through September.

Mrs. Buehr, who moved to Carmel in 1970, began her career as a portrait artist in Darien, Conn. where she exhibited in one-woman shows throughout the area. Later she commuted to New York City where she was an instructor at the Art Students' League and an affiliate of Portraits, Inc. Her paintings were shown at the invitational watercolor exhibits of the N.A.C., the Brooklyn Museum, La Rive Gauche, Studio One, The Art Students' League and other group shows.

While travelling in Europe with her writer-artist husband, Camilla became fascinated with local scenes and came home with a sketch pad full of flower vendors, crowded cafes, children at play and open markets from which she made decorative paintings.

After settling down on Carmel Point in a house with a garage that looked more like a studio, she continued to do portraits.

One day a client, whose portrait she had done, said she wanted an exotic wall hanging for her Bedouin tent room. They decided on peacocks! Camilla tried various fabrics and techniques and quite by accident found what she wanted. Heavy linen with rich colors inks and acrylics had a deep mysterious look — more like needle point than painting. It created a new genre for her of surrealist birds, animals and other dazzling creatures.

Now, besides her portraits, she works with decorators or individuals to accommodate an unusual space or fulfill an imaginative dream. Examples of both styles of works can be seen in this show. The foyer is open during all performances and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Friday.

From Coburn Charitable Trust

Art museum receives grant

The Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art has received a $250,000 grant from The Maureen Church Coburn Charitable Trust for its building expansion program.

Conditions of the grant require that the funds be matched by donations in the amounts of $125,000 for 1981-82 and $125,000 for 1982-83.

As the only museum between Santa Barbara and San Jose which is accredited by the American Association of Museums, the building expansion aims at improving the level of the museum's cultural services to this wide geographical region and at maintaining the professional standards required of AAM members.

According to Museum President, Dr. George Faul, the proposed new building additions will provide the museum with an elevator to allow access to all galleries for handicapped and senior citizen viewers. An improved security system will make possible the acquisition of more valuable art works and traveling exhibitions. A re-designed and more inviting entrance to the museum proper, and the urgently needed expansion of gallery, administration and work areas are also part of the new museum wing.

Faul stated that the confidence shown by the Coburn Trust in making the grant marked a major step in generating the additional support needed to commence the building program within the next two years.

Smuggled photos unveiled in P.G.

A Czech woman who smuggled 1968 invasion pictures out of her homeland is exhibiting the photographs for the first time ever at the Pacific Grove Art Center.

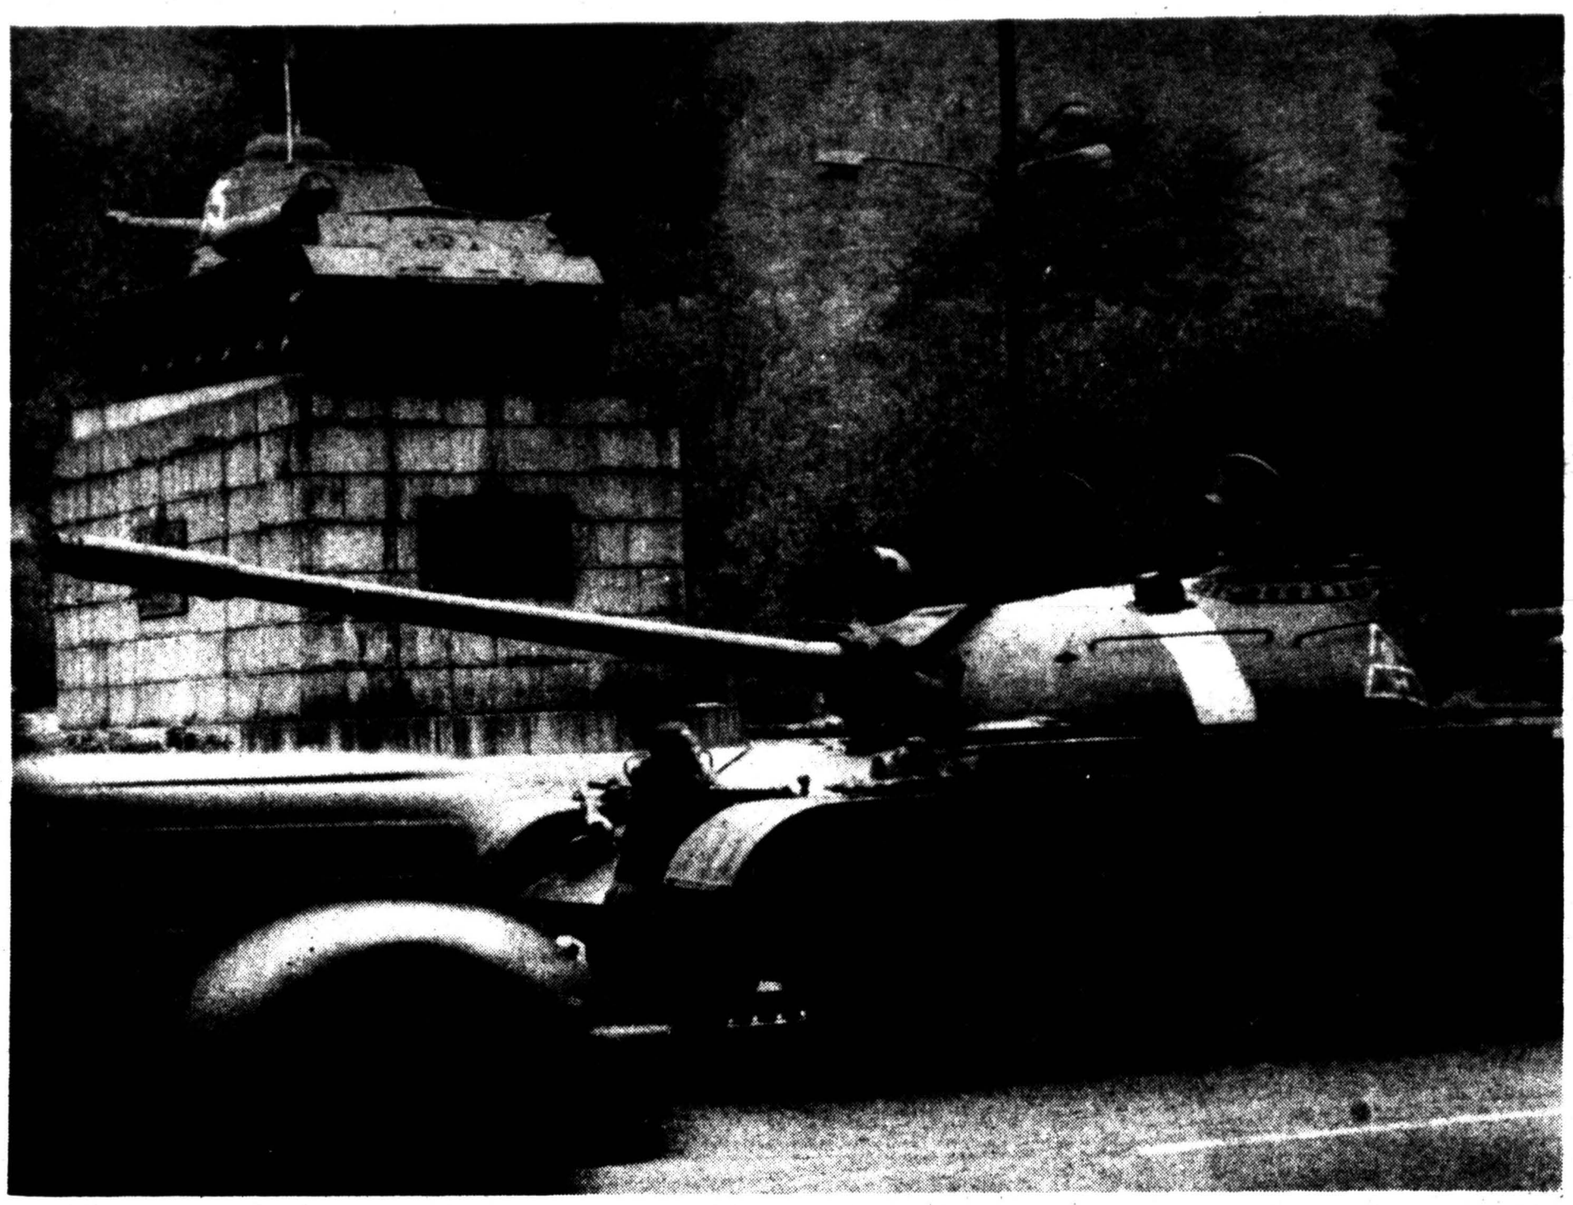
Zuzana Swansea took the photographs on Aug. 21, 1968 when she awoke to the sound of Russian tanks rumbling through Prague.

Before the Soviets were able to strangle the flow of information, the usually strongly-censored media were able to urge residents to record the invasion.

An amateur photographer, Swansea took pictures for three days with a twin reflex camera, despite the threat of physical harm from the Soviets.

Swansea sneaked the film across the border, where she was asked by the American media if she had any film to sell. She refused to sell her film, and has held onto the photographs until now.

The photographs will be on display until Sept. 1 at the art center at 568 Lighthouse Ave. The gallery is open Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.



THE SOVIET INVASION of Czechoslovakia — photographs of the invasion were taken by Zuzana Swansea despite Soviet threats of physical harm. She smuggled the film out of the country and has never displayed the photographs until now.

Everingham named to Pebble Beach post

Roger J. Everingham has been named vice president of the resort and recreation division of Pebble Beach Corp.

ROGER EVERINGHAM

Everingham fills the position formerly held by Tom Oliver, who recently assumed ownership and active management of Rocky Point Restaurant.

As head of the resort and recreation division, Everingham oversees The Lodge at Pebble Beach; The Beach & Tennis Club; and the three company-owned golf courses, Pebble Beach and Spyglass Hill, located in Pebble Beach, and the Old Del Monte Golf Course in Monterey.

Pebble Beach is the site of the 1982 U.S. Open Golf Championship, and Spyglass Hill serves as the home course for the Northern California Golf Assoc. Both Pebble Beach and Spyglass Hill are played — along with Cypress Point Club course — during the annual Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Tournament.

In his new job Everingham, 43, serves on the executive committee of the 1982 U.S. Open. Honorary chairman of this event is former President Gerald R. Ford of Rancho Mirage. Co-chairmen are Leonard K. Firestone and Darius Keaton, who have homes in Pebble Beach.

Before accepting his post with PBC, Everingham was president of his own hotel management consulting firm — R.J. Everingham, Inc. — for the past two years, based in Naples, Florida.

From 1970 to 1979, Everingham was vice president of hotel and club operations for the Deltona Corp., Miami, developers of the Marco Beach Hotel and Villas on Marco Island, Florida. The company also owned two other hotels in Florida, plus eight country clubs.

Everingham began his hotel career with the Sonesta Corp. in Boston. He spent eight years with Sonesta, starting as a trainee at the Plaza Hotel in New York, and went on to hold various marketing and managerial jobs, culminating with his serving as resident manager of the Sonesta Beach Hotel in Key Biscayne, Fla.

A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, Everingham has his B.S. degree in economics.

Originally a native of Buffalo, New York, he served in the U.S. Air Force. Everingham will be joined in Pebble Beach by his daughter, Leslie.

A hazard of the times

Indoor air pollution

Homeowners who invest in energy-saving additions to their homes without proper know-how may be exposing their families to a serious health hazard — indoor air pollution.

According to the current issue of National Wildlife magazine, air-tight homes outfitted with triple-glazed windows, air-lock vestibules, weather stripping and plastic vapor barriers in walls, floors and ceilings, may be "residential thermos bottles," which trap dangerous pollutants inside.

In fact, a report recently released by the National Academy of Sciences concluded that exposure to indoor air pollution is "common enough to account of substantial mortality and premature mortality."

The problem is much more prevalent in newer homes, the National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication emphasizes. In older, draftier homes the air is replaced by fresh air about once an hour. But in some of today's tightly-sealed houses the inside air is replaced only about once every ten hours. Because most Americans spend 80 to 90 percent of their time inside rather than out, there is a real threat. "In some circumstances, there's much more exposure to indoor pollution than outdoor pollution," Yale epidemiologist Dr. Jan Stolwijk told National Wildlife.

•

THE POLLUTANTS trapped inside air-tight dwellings may include:

•Formaldehyde, which is found in a host of products — particularly board and plywood, insulating foam, adhesives and household furnishings. The gas given off can cause eye irritation, breathing difficulties and nausea.

•Carbon Monoxide and oxides of nitrogen, which are mainly generated by gas ranges, heaters, wood stoves and tobacco smoke. The gasses can cause headaches, dizziness, and are linked to a variety of respiratory ailments.

•Suspended particulates from tobacco-smoking and wood-burning which can be inhaled and lodged in the lungs. The tiny particles of hydrocarbons can cause respiratory ailments.

•Radon, a decay product from radium, often found in soil and building materials. Where radon levels are high, the radioactive particles can accumulate in the lungs and may eventually cause cancer.

•Household chemicals, including furniture polish, oven cleaner, hair spray and air freshener. These products contain organic chemicals that add to indoor smog. Health impacts from these pollutants are not yet known.

Homeowners hoping to cut down on fuel bills needn't be discouraged. They can still take such energy-saving measures as installing storm windows, insulating ceilings and hot water heaters, and turning down thermostats. They should also be on the alert for warning signs. If the home seems stuffy, if there is excess moisture in the winter, or if family members suffer from frequent headaches or eye irritation, indoor air pollution may be a problem.

For energy-efficient homes the U.S. Department of Energy recommends air-to-heat exchangers. These devices, widely used in Scandinavia and Japan, boost ventilation while retaining much of a dwelling's heat.

"Conservation remains our cheapest form of available energy," NWF executive vice president Dr. Jay D. Hair emphasizes. "With proper guidance, homeowners can make energy efficient improvements to their homes and avoid the hazards of indoor air pollution."

FLAMES SWEEP OVER MOUNT TORO AND CONSUME HOME OF WRITER

Forest fires up the valley and back of Salinas have caused uneasiness in Carmel during the past week, as the smoke has been seen and its odor been perceptible throughout the village.

The ranch of Samuel G. Blythe, near Salinas, was burned over, and his home there was consumed by flames. Blythe is political editor of the Saturday Evening Post, and has a home also in Pebble Beach. His ranch is on the side of Mount Toro, where the flames have burned over some 7,000 acres of grazing lands. A force of nearly 100 men are fighting this fire.

PLANNING COMMISSION COMMITTEE TO DEVELOP NEW CITY SIGN POLICY

Carmel's traffic signs should be uniform, Mayor Barney Laiolo told the planning commission last week.

The mayor made his comments during a discussion of city policy and design standards for directional and instructional traffic signs for the village. The mayor, Walter McCloud, chairman of the city's parking-traffic committee, and Bill Jennings, a member of McCloud's committee and the Carmel Business Association's committee on parking and traffic, discussed the sign problem with the commission.

The CBA wants informational and directional signs to follow a standard design, such as in Europe, and McCloud said that the committee's main goal was to ease traffic and parking problems, with the matter of aesthetics left to the judgment of the planners.

MARION WILSON MADE UNIQUE CONTRIBUTIONS TO CARMEL VALLEY

Funeral services were held Tuesday at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church for Marion Wilson, the dynamic and forthright operator of the White Oaks Inn complex in Carmel Valley Village.

Mrs. Wilson, 79, was the widely acknowledged Great Lady of the Valley. Not an artist herself, she gathered the choicest work of the West's greatest artists for her Carmel Valley Art Gallery, and her reputation for quality extended far beyond Monterey County.

RLS OPENS DOORS TO GIRLS

When the doors to Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach open this fall, a new sight will be seen on the campus. For the first time since the school began in 1952, young women will be found among the students.

The administration of the school, working with the board of trustees, began studying the possibility of becoming co-educational a number of years ago. In May 1975 a report was submitted outlining the advantages of co-education.

In September, one year after the original report, approximately 50 young women will be present in the classes at Stevenson.

Bridge

An educated guess

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The Mona Lisa smile is easy to understand: you wear it when your partner misguesses whether to play the king or the jack, as South did in today's hand.

South took the ace of diamonds, led a trump to the ace, cashed the king of diamonds, ruffed a diamond in dummy and then gave East his trump trick. Back came the deuce of spades, and South had to guess whether to play the king or the jack.

CHEERFUL LOSER

As you already know, South guessed wrong. "You win some, and you lose some," South remarked cheerfully. The smile on North's face would have given a hyena indigestion.

South would eventually have to lead clubs from dummy, relying on East to have the ace. East had already played the K-Q of hearts. If East also had the ace of spades, he would have opened the bidding. Therefore South had to rely on West to have the ace of spades, and his only chance was to play the jack rather than the king of spades.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids one spade, you respond two clubs, and he then bids two hearts. The opponents pass. You hold: ♠ A 10 4 ♡ 6 ◇ Q J 10 7 ♣ Q 9 7 4 3. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two spades. There is no need to jump to three spades with one ace and no kings. Since your response of two clubs promised at least 10 points you can afford to make a minimum response now.

OPPORTUNITY DOES KNOCK

. . . on occasion. But it always seems to be the other guy who gets in on the ground floor and becomes an overnight success with a growing company. NOW is YOUR opportunity. A unique new company, which has quickly become the fastest-growing in the country, wants YOU to share in its growth. The financial potential is enormous. Of course, you're no doubt wondering if it will require an investment, or whether you'll have to sell some obscure product. But believe it or not, you don't have to invest a dime and you don't have to do any selling. Sure, you're skeptical, but don't you owe it to yourself to check out what might be the best opportunity to improve your standard of living you've ever found? For free information, just clip this ad and mail it, with name, address and phone number, to "Prestige," 922 W. Carmel Valley Rd., Carmel Valley, CA 93924.

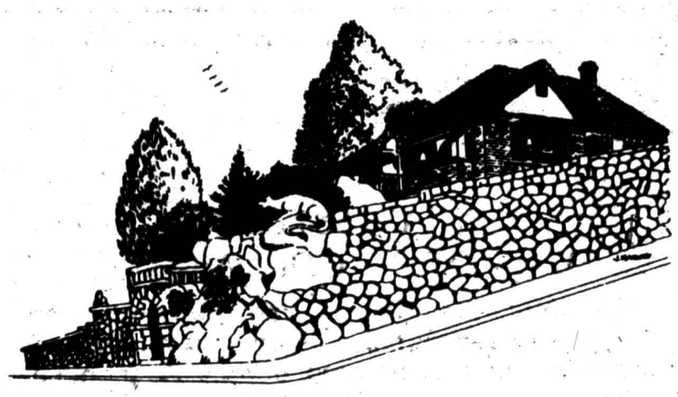
REDUCED $34,000

This gracious Carmel residence is typical of the architecture of the 1930's — beam ceilings and real plaster, hardwood floors and spacious rooms. Two bedrooms (one a unique second-story retreat, one a master suite), a special solarium, a modern kitchen all grace a ⅓-acre site with landscaping reminiscent of an arboretum. Most desirable Hatton Fields location. Priced at $295,000 and owner will carry with 20% down.



PACIFIC GROVE
"THE BOULDERS"

Possibly the most admired and well-known home on the Monterey Peninsula. The massive wall that surrounds the main house and guest house was built in the late 1800's. This Pacific Grove home is a marvel of craftsmanship — leaded, beveled glass, rich mahogany woods, brick exterior and tile roof. The massive carved lion guards the treasures within. Stroll through gardens, pond, walkways and gaze out to the sea. Watch the surprise sailboats, and the ever-changing colors of the harbor. In perfect condition and ready for the very discriminating buyer. If you are ready for the best this area has to offer, then call for an appointment. Asking $500,000.

BALANCE?

As critical to an investor as to a Realtor and seller

Buying & Selling are emotional, even for investment.

That's how we help — not by removing the emotion—but by providing the balance.

IMPECCABLE OCEAN VIEWS that can't be interrupted from this two-bedroom and two-bath beauty on Carmel's Scenic Road. Low maintenance, inside and out, with casual charm and elegance right where you've wanted to live. Owner financng available at $660,000.

BIG SUR ISOLATION attracts many. It's an independence of spirit. Those same people want a home they can redesign to make their own. This home in Sycamore Canyon offers over 7 acres, a two-bedroom, 1½-bath residence with interesting possibilities for country living, and abundant water at $190,000.

ANOTHER BIG SUR possibility is a lot in Palo Colorado Canyon. You can hear Rocky Creek from any point, and it's close enough to the Peninsula to commute. $51,500, and the owner will consider financing.

PACIFIC GROVE has a charm all its own, and this home fits. The large living room and three very large bedrooms all offer good living in a great location. Best of all, the owner is willing to finance at $215,000.

THINKING OF SELLING?
List with us. We're open 7 days, 9-6, which means a Realtor is always available to answer a Buyer's calls.

HEY BOSS! Sound good? Open your own shop in a 1,000-foot, high-traffic location in Carmel. $22,500 for level rent until 1984, with option. Windows!

TWO NEW LISTINGS, too new for complete information here. One is an immaculate family home in Carmel Woods for $329,500, another a contemporary in Carmel for $320,000. Call for details.

LIKE BIG SUR in Carmel, you're so much part of nature. Two one-bedroom suites upstairs and a separate studio apartment downstairs, it is a very flexible living arrangement. Included are freeform decks, a marble barbecue with gas lighter, and a seven-pool waterfall. An interesting home, and the owners will carry the loan. $290,000.

CARMEL VALLEY SUNSHINE on over an acre of ground, with the best kind of outdoor living available in this three-bedroom plus den home. With a hot tub in a deck off the master suite and an ideal location for a pool you could spend a day just swimming or tubbing and listening to the quiet. Sunny kitchen, warm and inviting family room, all on an ideal setting near Carmel Valley Ranch. $395,000.

REMEMBER YOSEMITE? No crowds, no smog. Oakhurst still is the way Yosemite used to be. We have a 100-acre parcel with its own lake, A-frame cabin, and owner financing at $395,000.

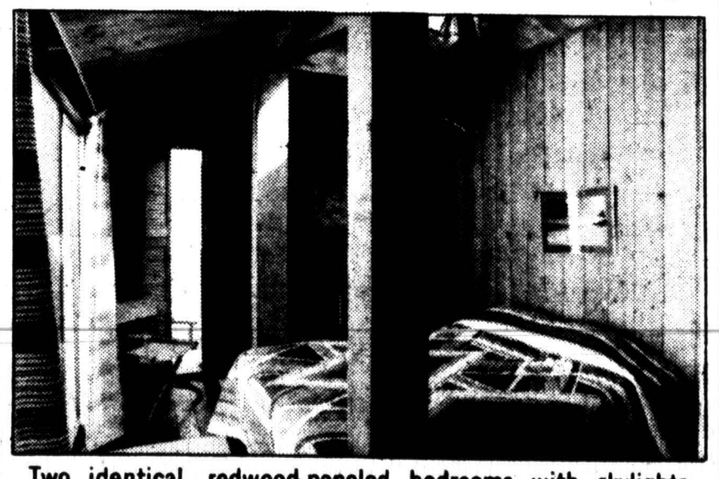
A PSL DEVELOPMENT

Hidden Home On The Big Sur Coast

Above a deep inlet where surf cascades over rocky islets, also sheltered by hillsides abounding in wildflowers on a two-and-a-half-acre seafront site, this home with a cedar shingle roof and redwood exterior, features interior use of native woods in all rooms, each opening to a sundeck.

Window walls capture miles of view in the living/dining area centered by a circular fireplace, also enhanced by a beamed ceiling and paneling of redwood, a dark-stained pine floor and built-ins inlcuding bookcases and a desk.

The open plan living/dining area includes, too, a compact kitchen with a breakfast bar, carefully crafted cabinets and counters, stainless steel sink and an electric stove. A built-in refrigerator increases the kitchen efficiency.



Two identical, redwood-paneled bedrooms with skylights in their beamed ceilings, dark pine floors, huge closets and window walls opening to decks are in a wing connected to the main living area by a glass-walled entrance gallery.

Even the tile-floored bathroom, with a sunken tub, opens to a deck, also exhibits the same skilled craftsmanship of native woods enhancing the entire interior. The price of this shore-front home, hidden by hillsides, also with extensive and intimate Big Sur Coast views, is $535,000.

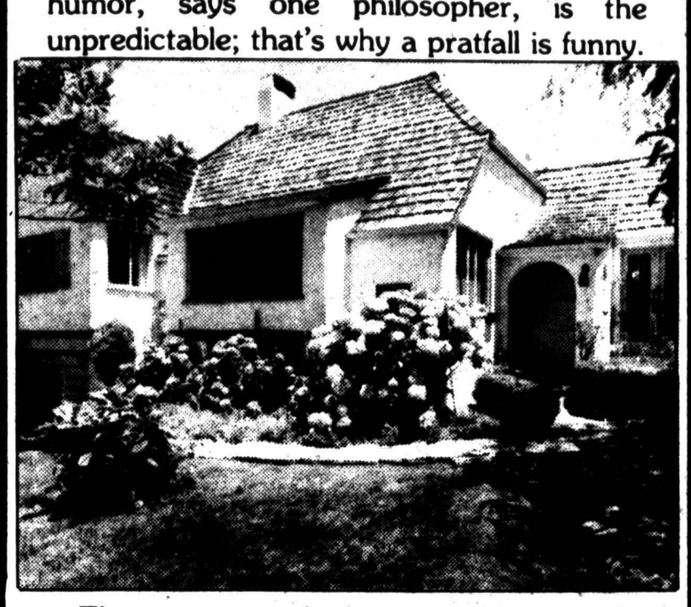
A Study in Angles

Nobody ever thinks much about a straight line: it starts at a point, then goes predictably forward to another point. The essence of humor, says one philosopher, is the unpredictable; that's why a pratfall is funny.



The essence of charm, too, is in the unexpected, and it comes to focus in this house. For instance, about the time you become adjusted to a steep shake roof with straight-arrow ridge pole, the gable ends are knocked off and become new triangular places. Just when you get used to flat descending surfaces, one comes down in a gentle curve above the doorway. Walls never go straight down from eaves to ground; they're indented with quaintly carved beams marking the point of change.

Inside, the surprises continue. The sunken entrance, with a curved door, is arched by a semi-hexagonal opening to the natural redwood paneled living room. This 22 x 16 chamber is replete with nooks and crannies, window seats and an extraordinary ceiling design. It's as though you were inside a mansard roof: the walls start up, then hesitate on a steep angle inward, then flatten to a wide, beamed ceiling. The textures of redwood, white plaster and a white stone fireplace blend into a richly satisfying unity.

This curiously pleasing mix is repeated in the dining room. And in the bedrooms where paneling gives way to plaster, but the same ceiling lines are repeated. There are 3 bedrooms and 3 baths, one originally maid's quarters off the kitchen, the others generous spaces on the opposite wing.

The house is on San Antonio, very near Carmel Point, one block from the beach. It's built in a U-shape with a magnificent protected patio at the center. A sizeable study (or den) is at the rear, with its own free-standing fireplace. You know how a good beef stew is better the second day? This house is like that: time has had a hand in its blending. You'll love it! $375,000.

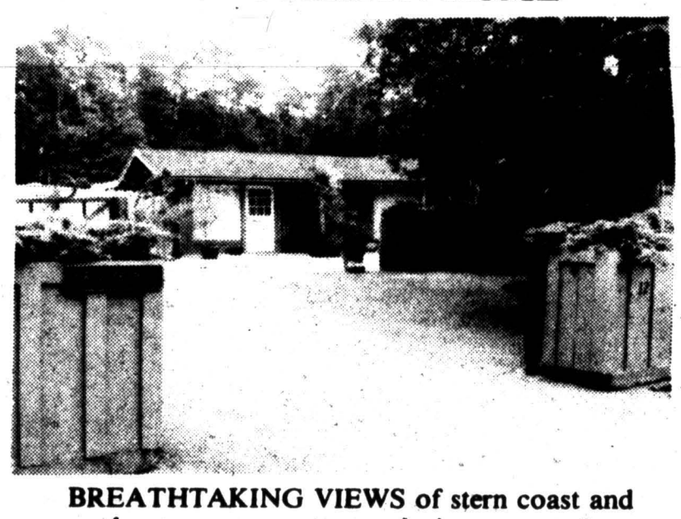
PEBBLE BEACH

A GLIMPSE OF greenery in an airy atrium and a peek of the golf course beyond greet the visitor when the door opens a warm welcome to this spacious home on the 13th fairway of Spyglass Hill Golf Club. The interior more than lives up to its promise. Beyond the dramatic entrance foyer with its skylighted atrium, and down a couple of steps, is the large living room with fireplace, overlooking the ever-green fairway. A good-sized dining room, also with golf course views, leads to the modern kitchen with its generous tiled counter space and ample breakfast area. A sitting area for television, a powder room, commodious master bedroom suite, and two other comfortable bedrooms, and a bath complete the picture. Altogether, a luxurious home, easy to maintain inside and out, and ideally suited for formal or casual entertaining. Well priced for this prestigious area at $395,000.

AN UNCOMMON HOME



BREATHTAKING VIEWS of stern coast and rugged canyon . . . utter seclusion, yet a short distance to shopping or business. This unusually attractive three-bedroom artist's home in Carmel Highlands offers gorgeous panoramas of ocean, pine forests and the majestic slopes of Mal Paso Canyon. Dramatic ocean views from two bedrooms, ktichen and living room. Spacious family room with fireplace, separate studio, and sunny patios are among other features, along with luxurious new carpeting and handsome new parquet flooring. $575,000.

IT'S SO QUIET

AND PEACEFUL in this nice neighborhood south of Ocean Avenue only three short blocks to the beach. We're offering a modern, attractive family home with large living room, dining room opening onto a sunny redwood deck, two bedrooms on the first level and a comfortable master suite above. Fences enclose the Mid-Valley, just under an acre site of this shake-roofed, redwood home wrapped by a deck and set amid terraced landscapping including oaks, pines, peppers, also patios, lawns, a family orchard and vegetable plots.

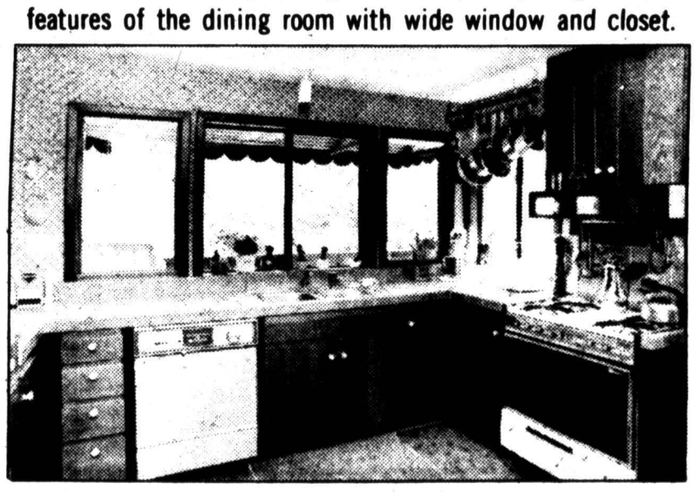
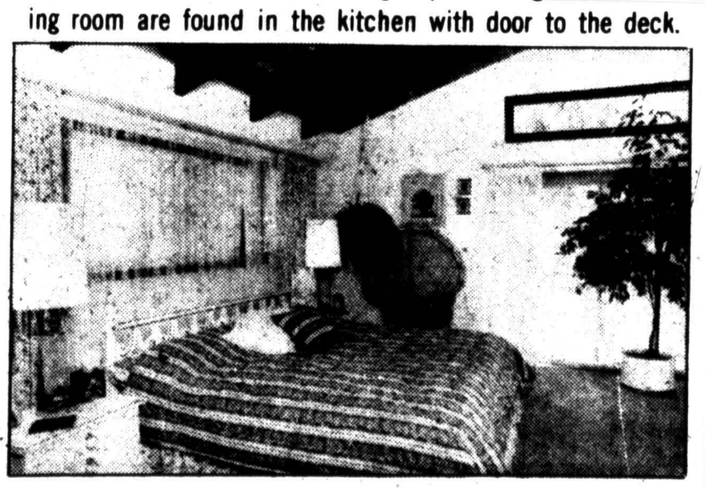
Beamed ceiling and wall paneling of redwood, a fireplace and carpeting enhance the living room which extends into a sunroom with parquet floor and glass doors to the deck.

Handsome redwood paneling and custom carpeting also are features of the dining room with wide window and closet.



Redwood cabinets, tile counters, overhead lighting, wallpaper and stained glass framing a passthrough to the living room are found in the kitchen with door to the deck.



The master suite with a sitting room and its own deck is on the third level. Highlander Pipe Band to perform at Forest Theater

The skirl of pipes and the swirl of kilts will come to the outdoor Forest Theater Sunday, Aug. 30 for the closing performance in the Summer Sunday Afternoon series of free concerts.

St. Peter's Highlander Pipe Band will perform at 2 p.m. at the theater at Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel.

The bagpipes, folk songs, and dances of Scotland have a history which goes back for centuries. The Scottish bagpipe, as played by St. Peter's Highlander Pipe Band, has evolved over many years from its primitive beginnings. The music of the pipes is suitable for dancing and marching but is most of all rousing; who can resist tapping their feet when a kilted pipe band comes marching into view. Whenever a clan went into battle, it was accompanied by its pipers to raise the spirits of the men. In fact, in the 18th century the bagpipe was declared "an instrument of war" by the Hanoverian government and even its possession was a capital crime. Today, groups such as the St. Peter's Highlander Pipe Band still play the "instrument of war."

Under the direction of Pipe Major James McElroy, this prize-winning band is composed of members ranging in age from 11 years to just a wee bit older. McElroy has directed bands both in the United States and the United Kingdom.

The Plumed Serpent is a colorful, exciting new galleria of Mexican folk art. Here, a traditionally brilliant yarn painting (yarns carefully pressed into beeswax) by Juan Silva, an Huichol Indian from Guadalajara, shows the creative skill of these talented people.

It's a Carmel Tradition, to relax outdoors and have a bit to eat in a beautiful spot. Come enjoy the Plaza's colorful gardens soon.

A delightful new shop, Allison's has fine apparel for girls, boys and the new born baby. On the Plaza Level near the fountain, Allison's chose these pretty dresses by Gen-way: a peasant dress for girls 4-6X, the check with bouffant ruffle for little girls 2-4.

Leather Bound Ltd. features elegant imported whip snake leather executive accessories: legal pad folder, desk agenda and pocket secretary are most popular. Available in several colors and black plus fine calf with inlaid snake skin . . . by Scully.

Outstanding among the fine shoes and briefcases at Larry Lemus' is this traditional tassel moc loafer crafted by Bruno Magli of Italy . . . a handsome looking, comfortable shoe. The briefcase of calfskin is beautifully fitted, and imported from Italy, too.

Handy for late fall football games and outings, The Village Traveler's handsome flasks: Safari sailcloth and leather case holds a 12 oz. hip flask, a zippered leather case with 8 oz. flask has a handy belt clip. Both by Noymer for those who travel first class.
